VOL. LXVII. WELLSBORO, TIOGA COUNTY, THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1923. NO. 23.

THE WELLSBORO CHAUTAUQUA

Opens on August 18th and Continues for One Week --The Program

The guarantors for the Wellsboro Chautauqua met the advance representative, Miss Ferris, at the court house last Wednesday evening when the preliminary details relative to Wellsboro's annual feast of entertainment and instruction were considered and disposed of in so far as possible. The date this year is August 18 to 24.

A perusal of the program, which follows, obviates any necessity of urging upon Wellsboro people the high quality of each and every number thereon. The programs, giving full information as to each lecture and entertainment are now being distributed.

First Week-Day—3:00 Opening Exercises, Chairman of Guarantors; 3:15 Lecture, to be announced; 3:45 Concert, Loren Bates Company; 4:45 Junior Chautauqua, for all Juniors; 7:30 Concert and entertainment, Loren Bates Company; 8:15 Lecture, "The Turn of the Tide," Hon. Henry T. Rainey.

Second Week-Day—9:00 Junior Chautauqua; 2:30 Lecture, To be announced; 3:15 Concert, Ruby Gall Light Opera Revue Company; 7:30 Concert, Ruby Gall Light Opera Revue Company; 8:15 Lecture, "Crime and Punishment," Frank Tannenbaum.

Third Week-Day — 9:00 Junior Chautauqua; 2:30 Concert, Smith-Hufsmith Company; 3:15 Lecture, "A Poet's Gospel of Good Will," Dennis A. McCarthy, LL.D.

Fourth Week-Day — 9:00 Junior Chautauqua, 2:30 Concert, Stallings-Toy Company; 3:15 Lecture, "Seeming Life Whole," William H. Stout; 7:30 Concert, Stallings-Toy Company; 8:15 Lecture, "We and The World," Hon. William C. Redfield.

Fifth Week-Day—9:00 Junior Chautauqua; 2:30 Entertainment, One Act Play; 3:15 Lecture, "The Wonders of Burbank," Henry A. Adrian; 7:30 Comedy-Drama, "Crossed Wires," a feature entertainment.

Sixth Week-Day—9:00 Junior Chautauqua; 2:30 Junior Pageant, "Her Family on Display," Junior Chautauquans; 3:15 Concert, Visocchi-Lybarger Company; 7:30 Concert, Visocchi-Lybarger Company; 8:15 Entertainment, "A Cartoon and Comedy Review," Alton Packard.

The adult season tickets this year are $3.00. The single admissions are 75 cents except on the third and fifth evenings (the plays) when the single admission is one dollar. Thus, if you go to see even one of the plays and one lecture (as you surely will) you will expend $1.75 and for only $1.25 additional you can purchase a season ticket good for the entire week.

As in former years the Junior Chautauqua is in charge of competent directors and it is hoped that Wellsboro parents will avail themselves of this opportunity to give the children the advantages secured to them by the expenditure of $1.00 for a junior season ticket. Admission to the Junior Chautauqua are from six to fourteen years of age. A souvenir will be given with each of first 100 junior tickets sold—something the kiddies will enjoy. These souvenirs may be obtained upon application to Miss Martha Yahn.

A new departure is in the nature of a youth's season ticket (for youths from 13 to 18 years of age, inclusive) which may be purchased for two dollars and is good for all afternoon and evening sessions.

A suitable program will be arranged for Sunday, August 19, in which Chautauqua entertainers and the local clergymen will take part.

D. C. Smith has been named as chairman of the ticket selling committee, he in turn appointing captains who have perfected a campaign, with the assistance of a corps of solicitors, which should result in a sufficient advance sale to relieve the guarantors of further liability.

For the sum of three dollars, then, you will have six days of fine entertainment and instruction which could not be obtained under any other circumstances for twice that amount. The excellence of Chautauqua's programs is well known to the people of this vicinity and we can assure them that this year's offerings are entirely up to standard.

Be a Chautauqua booster and thus show your interest in the welfare of your community.

17 Billion Marks An Hour.

Forty-one German printing plants, working day and night, disgorged 17,563,819,142 marks' worth of fresh paper money every hour during the first week in July, according to figures available. The total paper currency circulation on July 7 was 20,241,782,966,000 marks, an increase of 2,950,721,610,000 over June 30. The aluminum coinage in circulation increased for the same period from 1,000,000,000 marks to 20,000,000,000.

The printers are working in three shifts, covering the entire twenty-four hours every day in the week. A 500-mark note is worth no more now than the paper on which it is printed. All notes are printed from type instead of copper plates.

LOCAL BIRD LOVERS HONORED.

Bird Photographs Made by Frank Pagan Featured in Magazine.

"Bird Lore," a bi-monthly magazine published at Harrisburg and very popular with nature-lovers, features in the current issue four photographs of a ruby throated humming bird on her nest, and photographs of the young birds in various stages of their activities, including "feeding time."

These pictures were taken by Frank Pagan, assisted by Frank Cameron, two enthusiastic bird lovers, and represent the culmination of many weeks of patient, painstaking effort and watchful waiting during which time dozens of exposures were made. The nest hung in an old apple tree on the premises of John Gerken, of West avenue.

When one considers that a full grown humming bird is not much larger than your thumb and an adept at avoiding human eyes, some idea may be formed of the effort and skill required to transfer her likeness to the film.

Mr. Pagan has the photographs on exhibition at his store, together with other pictures of bird life in pleasing evidence of his ability to get the "close up" on his feathered friends.

THIEVES AT LAWRENCEVILLE.

Make Early Morning Raid on Farm—Later Abandon Truck and Contents.

Two men traveling by truck stole two veal calves from the Frank Ryan farm, near Lawrenceville, last Friday morning and later abandoned the truck with its livestock near Presho to avoid capture by pursuers.

A Lindley resident, driving past the Ryan farm, saw the truck standing near the barn. Becoming suspicious he notified officer Ball, of Lawrenceville, who attempted to stop the truck as it passed through the village. The driver put on full speed ahead and the officer took up the chase in another car. The thieves becoming frightened, jumped from the truck near Presho and disappeared in the woods. The truck and calves were brought back to Lawrenceville where the car is being held and the authorities are making every effort to locate the thieves.

The fact that the truck has only one license, and that a pleasure car license, would indicate that the truck had been stolen, along with the plates to cover up traces of the thieves.

Woman Postmaster at Renovo.

Congressman Edgar R. Kiess announced last Friday that he has recommended the appointment of Miss Teresa G. Burke as postmaster at Renovo. Miss Burke, who has been assistant postmaster for seventeen years, is the first woman in central Pennsylvania to receive appointment to a postmastership of the importance of Renovo. The office pays a salary of $2,500 a year. She is one of six who took the Civil Service examination, all others being men.

Renovo is an important railroad town and the post office which is a second class office is one of the busiest in central Pennsylvania. The selection of Miss Burke by Congressman Kiess afforded him his first opportunity to recommend a woman for so big an office in his District. Prior to this Congressman Kiess has named a number of women to third and fourth class offices, and in doing so, he has given women the same consideration as men in public affairs.

Only 88 women in Pennsylvania have been appointed to offices better than 4th class. Since President Harding assumed office he has named 1809 women to first, second and third class postmasterships out of a total of about 12,000 appointments made and most of them, as in the case of Miss Burke, have been appointed from positions in post offices where they have been efficient assistants.

Bassage—Callahan.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth C. Bassage and Leonard E. Callahan, both of Corning, took place Saturday, July 21, at 8:30 p. m., in the Presbyterian parsonage at Atlanta, N. Y. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Woodard, the pastor. The young couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Cook, of North Cohocton.

The bride was very attractively gowned in white Canton crepe and her attending matron wore blue canton.

Mrs. Callahan is a very charming young woman. She is the daughter of Mrs. J. C. Bassage, of Corning, and is a billing clerk in the office of the J. B. Maltby company. Mr. Callahan is the son of A. A. Callahan, of Welsboro. He is also employed by the J. B. Maltby Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Callahan returned to Corning and will make their home for the present at 116 Davis street.

Presbyterian Church Notes.

Services will be discontinued during the month of August. The trustees have arranged to install an adequate heating plant during this period. It is expected that this work will extend a few days into September, but it will not interfere with the fall program.

The address of the pastor will be Caldwell-on-Lake George N. Y., care of C. J. DeLong. He earnestly requests that he be informed of any call on his services and will respond.

The girls of Miss Deans' class, who spent the week on Cayuga lake, had a fine time and came back with a knowledge of the surrounding country and also of swimming and other athletic sports.

The picnic of the Missionary society, in the pine grove beside Mr. Leonard Harrison's farm at Ansonia, was largely attended. Some 125 enjoyed the talk by Catherine Harrison and the various events planned by the men. These included trap shooting, target practice and pitching of quoits. After supper a huge bonfire was lighted and the group gathered around for the singing of songs and familiar hymns. It was generally voted that they had ideal hosts and a royal time.

The oratrio rendered by the singers from the granges of the county in the church on last Sunday morning was a beautiful and finished sacred concert. This work reflects credit on Mr. Dan Ford and the singers and is a challenge of the lovers of good music in Wellsboro to gather together in the fall and do something equally good.

The outing planned by the Pres nightly club has been postponed. Due announcement will be made of the date to the members.

DEATH OF ELIAS MERRICK.

Prominent Chatham Citizen Passed Away July 21.

Again our hearts are saddened and bowed down with grief at the passing away of one we cherished and admired. On July 21, Elias Merrick died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. S. Allen Strawn in Chatham township, near Little Marsh.

Mr. Merrick was born at Middlebury, Feb. 7, 1844, the son of William L. and Caroline Whitney Merrick. He was a lifelong resident of Middlebury and Chatham townships, where he leaves many warm friends.

Though but a boy when war was declared between the North and South, he offered his services and was accepted as a soldier at Harrisburg, Aug. 8, 1862. He served in Co. A., 136th Pa., V. I., 2nd Brig., 1st Div., 1st A. C. He enlisted as a private and was promoted to corporal. Mr. Merrick did service of various kinds and fought at Chancellorsville and at Fredericksburg, where he was wounded by a gunshot in the left side and leg. He was honorably discharged at Harrisburg, June 1863.

He was united in marriage to Paulina A. Spencer, daughter of Aurora and Catherine Conklin Spencer at Little Marsh, May 22, 1867, and to this union were born three children, Myrtle R., who died, April 11, 1882; Nina P., wife of Bert Cloos and Elsie M., wife of S. Allen Strawn. Two grandsons, Leland E. and Llewellyn R. Closs and one great grandson, Drexel R., son of Leland E. and Cassia Hornsby Cloos, are also left to miss a kind grandfather's love. Also one sister, Mrs. S. G. Doane, of Elkland, and several nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Merrick died Jan. 22, 1913, after a long and tedious illness and since that time Mr. Merrick has lived with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Strawn.

As a citizen and friend he left nothing to be desired, always cheerful and looking on the brighter side of life, he helped his fellowmen more than they realized and perhaps more than he, himself knew. He was for a number of years in the employ of Nehemiah and S. P. Beach, who conducted a grist and saw mill, one mile west of Little Marsh, and the close friendship and esteem between the Messrs. Beach and him would attest strongly for the faithfulness and character of the deceased as also the Messrs. Beach, both of whom have passed away.

He was a charter member and Past O. of D., of Alfred Toles Post, No. 320, G. A. R., and a more faithful member could not be ound. He was a member of the M. E. church at Little Marsh, where he joined in Feb., 1912 and where he attended services when his health would permit and where as in the neighborhood and village, he will be greatly missed. He was a close student of the Bible and searched diligently as we are bidden to do, for guidance.

After prayer at the house, services were held at the M. E. church at Little Marsh, Rev. F. H. Chapman, a former pastor, officiating. There were five old soldiers present: Chancey Rice, V. W. Lewis, L. C. Smith, Albert Love and A. J. Dickinson, to do last possible honor to their departed comrade and it calls to the minds of friends and neighbors the many such gatherings they have seen Mr. Merrick attend, as he was one who felt that all we could do for the suffering or all the respect to show for a departing comrade was none too much, and always at such a gathering Mr. Merrick was there to do his best.

Military services were held at the grave, conducted by the Legion of Welisboro, and, as was very appropriate at the closing of the very impressive service, the flag of the Alfred Toles Post was folded and placed in the casket on Mr. Merrick's breast as the last member of the Post, it seemed only fitting that the flag which has done service long and so well should pass with him.

Hands of friends laid him in his last resting place, the bearers being: P. H. Merrick, F. J. Merrick, Burt Potter, Homer Cloos, Calvin Goodwin and Claude Spencer, in the Middlebury Union cemetery at Keeneyville.

TWO KILLED IN AUTO CRASH.

Former Westfield Man and Companion Killed Near Naples, N. Y.

Irving Pillsbury, of Atlanta, and N. E. Batterson, of Binghamton, formerly of Westfield, were both killed last Friday when the automobile in which they were riding struck the frame of the iron bridge over the Naples creek on the Naples Atlanta highway in the western part of the village of Naples. The impact tore the west end of the bridge from its support and the men, wrecked automobile and the west half of the bridge dropped ten feet into three feet of water in the creek.

The end of one of the girders went through the windshield of the car and crushed the chest of Mr. Pillsbury causing instant death. Mr. Batterson was thrown from the car and then pinned under it with part of his body in the water of the creek. He was immediately removed by motorists and given medical attention, but injuries to his chest caused his death within twenty minutes.

Mr. Batterson, who is a drug salesman and well known to the trade in this vicinity, suffered an injury to his leg in Hornell on Thursday and was hastening to his home in Binghamton for treatment when the fatal accident occurred.

BANDITS OBTAIN $70,000 PAYROLL

Hold Up Electric Car Near Scranton and Escape With Loot--Reward Offered

One man was killed and four others seriously wounded during a hold up of an electric car on the Laurel line, near Scranton, last Monday morning when seven bandits escaped with two satchels containing $70,126. The money represented the payroll at two anthracite collieries.

Edward Murphy, a passenger, was shot and instantly killed, P. J. Derrien and Archie Hensall, paymasters of the West End Coal Company of Shickshinney, were seriously wounded; Phil Scribner and an unidentified woman also were shot but less seriously wounded.

Hensall and another paymaster were carrying the money to pay off workers in the West End Anthracite Mine. About five miles from Scranton, near Moosic, where the train stopped for a few minutes, two men came aboard and joined five who had boarded the train at Scranton.

After a whispered conference the seven bandits, all of whom were young men, pulled their guns, and ordered all passengers to throw up their hands. Upon the refusal of the paymasters to respond the robbers opened fire, killing one man and wounding the four other passengers, as above noted.

With the money in their possession, the bandits made off in the direction of Wilkes-Barre in a large motor car which apparently had been held in readiness for their escape.

Spurred by the offer of $2,500 reward for the arrest of the bandits one of the greatest man hunts that ever obtained in Northern Pennsylvania is now in progress. Police officers, State and municipal, and authorities of all north tier towns and cities are taking part in the hunt. The car in which the highwaymen escaped bore Pennsylvania license number 424-920 and has been identified as having been stolen from a Scranton merchant several weeks ago.

All main highways throughout Northern Pennsylvania and Southern New York are being guarded by State and local officers, heavily armed and further developments are expected hourly.

GAINES NEWS.

Barn Burned to Ground, Owner Heavy Loser—Other Notes of Interest.

Gaines, Aug. 1.—Considerable excitement was caused here on Monday, of last week, when the barn on the M. M. Smith farm, burned to the ground with all its contents. Harry Marsh, who works the farm, was a heavy loser, the pressed hay from last year and considerable new hay which he had put in the week before, together with his wagon and other tools being destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Held on Serious Charge.

Truman Langdon, of Coudersport, aged eighteen years, was arrested one day last week charged with rape on 12-year-old Wilma Butler, of the same place. He was held in bail for trial at the October term of court. William Ayers, of near Coudersport, is being held on a similar charge preferred by the parents of Louise A. Chilson, aged fifteen years. Ayers is a married man and has one child. Potter county papers in reporting these dastardly crimes refrain from the publication of the details in either case as being too revolting for public print.

—Mrs. Phoebe May Mosher died at her home in Elmira Heights last Saturday morning, aged 45 years. She is survived by her husband, David F. Mosher; a son, Floyd, and a daughter, Gladys; two sisters, Mrs. Minnie Herbert, of Elmira, and Mrs. Ida Manning of Asaph Run.

SYNOPSIS

PROLOGUE.—Realizing that she has a possible chance of being saved, as the Lusitania is sinking, a stranger gives a young American girl a package which he asks her to deliver to the American ambassador in England. She is saved.

CHAPTER I.—In London, Former Lieut. "Tommy" Beresford and Miss Prudence Cowley—"Tuppence"—discharged army nurse, form an organization, "The Young Adventurers, Ltd." Tuppence makes a business appointment with a man, Edward Whittington, who offers her easy employment, but on giving her name as "Jane Finn," which she had heard on the street, Whittington shows agitation and Tuppence is told to return next day.

CHAPTER II

A Setback.

The moment was not quite so triumphant as it ought to have been. To begin with, the resources of Tommy's pockets were somewhat limited. In the end the fare was managed.

"Well," said Mr. Beresford, at length able to relieve his feelings, "what the—dickens did you want to take a taxi for?"

"I was afraid I might be late and keep you waiting," said Tuppence gently. "And really and truly, I haven't got anything smaller than a five-pound note. Now let's go to lunch. How about the Savoy?"

Tommy grinned.

"How about the Ritz?"

"On second thoughts, I prefer the Piccadilly. It's nearer. We shan't have to take another taxi. Come along."

"Is this a new brand of humor? Or is your brain unhinged?" inquired Tommy. "Tuppence, old girl, what has really come over you?"

Tommy groaned.

"I must have been drinking unawares! Am I dreaming, Tuppence, or do I really behold a large quantity of five-pound notes being waved about in a dangerous fashion?"

"Even so, O King! Now, will you come and have lunch?"

"I'll come anywhere. But what have you been doing? Holding up a bank?"

"All in good time."

"And now tell me," said Tommy, unable to restrain his pent-up curiosity any longer, as they sat in state in the Piccadilly.

Miss Cowley told him.

"And the curious part of it is," she ended, "that I really did invent the name of Jane Finn! I didn't want to give my own because of poor father—in case I should get mixed up in any thing shady."

"Perhaps that's so," said Tommy slowly. "But you didn't invent it."

"What?"

"No. I told it to you. Don't you remember, I said yesterday I'd overheard two people talking about a female called Jane Finn? That's what brought the name into your mind so pat."

"So you did. I remember now. How extraordinary—" Tuppence tailed off into silence. Suddenly she aroused herself. "What were they like, the two men you passed?"

"One was a big fat sort of chap. Clean shaven, I think—and dark."

"That's him," cried Tuppence, in an ungrammatical squeal. "That's Whittington! What was the other man like?"

"I can't remember. I didn't notice him particularly. It was really the outlandish name that caught my attention."

"And people say that coincidences don't happen!" Tuppence tackled her luncheon happily.

But Tommy had become serious.

"Look here, Tuppence, old girl, what is this going to lead to?"

"More money," replied his companion.

"I know that. You've only got one idea in your head. What I mean is, what about the next step? How are you going to keep the game up? After all, you know, you can't bluff him forever. You're sure to slip up sooner or later. And, anyway, I'm not at all sure that it isn't actionable—blackmail, you know."

"Nonsense. Blackmail is saying you'll tell unless you are given money. Now, there's nothing I could tell, because I don't really know anything. I've got a plan. Obviously what we've got to do is to find out more about it all."

Tommy applauded.

"Don't jeer. We can only find out through Whittington. We must discover where he lives, what he does—sleuth him, in fact. Now I can't do it, because he knows me, but he only saw you for a minute or two in Lyons'. He's not likely to recognize you. My plan is this," Tuppence went on calmly: "I'll go alone tomorrow. I'll put him off again like I did today. It doesn't matter if I don't get any more money at once. Fifty pounds will last us a few days. You'll hang about outside. When I come out I shan't speak to you in case he's watching. But I'll take up my stand somewhere near, and when he comes out of the building I'll drop a handkerchief or something, and off you go!"

"Off I go—where?"

"Follow him, of course, silly! What do you think of the idea?"

"Part of thing one reads about. In books. People will wonder what I'm up to. Anyway, it will be rather a lark."

They met by arrangement the following morning and proceeded cityward. Tommy remained on the opposite side of the road while Tuppence plunged into the building.

Tommy strolled slowly down to the end of the street, then back again. Just as he came abreast of the buildings, Tuppence darted across the road.

"Tommy! The place is shut. I can't make anyone hear."

"That's odd."

"Isn't it? Come up with me, and let's try again."

Tommy followed her. As they passed the third floor landing a young clerk came out of an office. He hesitated a moment, then addressed himself to Tuppence.

"Were you wanting the Esthonia Glassware?"

"Yes, please."

"It's closed down. Since yesterday afternoon. Company being wound up, they say. Not that I've ever heard of it myself. But anyway the office is to let."

"Th-thank you," faltered Tuppence. "I suppose you don't know Mr. Whittington's address?"

"Afraid I don't. They left rather suddenly."

"Thank you very much," said Tommy. "Come on, Tuppence."

They descended to the street, where they gazed at one another blankly.

"That's torn it," said Tommy at length. "Cheer up, old thing, it can't be helped."

"Can't it, though!" Tuppence's little chin shot out defiantly. "Do you think this is the end? If so, you're wrong. It's just the beginning!"

"The beginning of what?"

"Of our adventure! Tommy, don't you see, if they are scared enough to run away like this, it shows that there must be a lot in this Jane Finn business! Well, we'll get to the bottom of it. We'll run them down! We'll be sleuths in earnest!"

"Yes, but there's no one left to sleuth."

"No, that's why we'll have to start all over again. Lend me that bit of pencil. Thanks. Wait a minute—don't interrupt. There!" Tuppence handed back the pencil, and surveyed the piece of paper on which she had written with a satisfied eye:

"What's that?"

"Advertisement."

"You're not going to put that thing in after all?"

"No, it's a different one." She handed him the slip of paper.

Tommy read the words on it aloud:

"Wanted—Any information respecting Jane Finn. Apply Y. A."

The day of disillusionment had been a Wednesday. On Thursday the advertisement had duly appeared. On Friday letters might be expected to arrive at Tommy's rooms.

He had been bound by an honorable promise not to open any such letters if they did arrive, but to repair to the National gallery, where his colleague would meet him at ten o'clock.

Tuppence was first at the rendezvous. She ensconced herself on a red velvet seat until she saw the familiar figure enter the room.

"Well?"

"Well," returned Mr. Beresford provokingly. "Which is your favorite picture?"

"Aren't there any answers?"

Tommy shook his head with a deep and somewhat overacted melancholy.

"I didn't want to disappoint you, old thing, by telling you right off. It's too bad. Good money wasted." He sighed. "Still, there it is. The advertisement has appeared, and—there are only two answers!"

Tuppence snatched the two precious envelopes from him unceremoniously, and scrutinized them carefully.

"Thick paper, this one. It looks rich. We'll keep it to the last and open the other first."

"Right you are. One, two, three, go!"

Tuppence's little thumb ripped open the envelope, and she extracted the contents.

"Dear Sir:

"Referring to your advertisement in this morning's paper, I may be able to be of some use to you. Perhaps you could call and see me at the above address at eleven o'clock tomorrow morning.

"Yours truly,

"A. CARTER."

"27 Carshalton Gardens," said Tuppence, referring to the address. "That's Gloucester road way. Now for the other letter. I'll read it:

"Dear Sir—

"Re your advertisement, I should be glad if you would call round somewhere about lunch-time.

"Yours truly,

"JULIUS P. HERSHEIMMER."

"Ha!" said Tommy. "Do I smell a Boche? Or only an American millionaire of unfortunate ancestry? At all events we'll call at lunch-time. It's a good time—frequently leads to free food for two."

Tuppence nodded an eager assent.

"Now for Carter. We'll have to hurry."

Carshalton terrace proved to be an unimpeachable row of what Tuppence called "adult looking houses." They rang the bell at No. 27, and a maid could answered the door. She looked so respectable that Tuppence's heart sank. Upon Tommy's request for Mr. Carter, she showed them into a small study on the ground floor, where she left them. Hardly a minute elapsed, however, before the door opened, and a tall man with a lean, hawklike face and a tired manner entered the room.

"Ha!" Said Tommy, Do I Smell a Boche?"

"Mr. Y. A.?" he said, and smiled. His smile was distinctly attractive. "Do sit down, both of you."

They obeyed. He himself took a chair opposite to Tuppence and smiled at her encouragingly. There was something in the quality of his smile that made the girl's usual readiness desert her.

As he did not seem inclined to open the conversation, Tuppence was forced to begin.

"We wanted to know—that is, would you be so kind as to tell us anything you know about Jane Finn?"

"Jane Finn? Ah!" Mr. Carter appeared to reflect. "Well, the question is, what do you yourself know about her?"

Tuppence drew herself up.

"I don't see that that's got anything to do with it."

"No? But it has, you know, really it has." He smiled again in his tired way, and continued reflectively. "So that brings us down to it again. What do you know about Jane Finn?"

"Come now," he continued, as Tuppence remained silent. "You must know something to have advertised as you did?" He leaned forward a little, his weary voice held a hint of persuasiveness. "Suppose you tell me. . . ."

"We couldn't do that, could we, Tommy?"

But, to her surprise, her companion did not back her up. His eyes were fixed on Mr. Carter, and his tone when he spoke held an unusual note of deference.

"I dare say the little we know won't be any good to you, sir. But such as it is, you're welcome to it."

Mr. Carter slewed round in his chair. His eyes asked a question.

Tommy nodded.

"Yes, sir, I recognized you at once. Saw you in France when I was with the Intelligence. As soon as you came into the room, I knew—"

Mr. Carter held up his hand.

"No names, please. I'm known as Mr. Carter here. It's my cousin's house, by the way. She's willing to lend it to me sometimes when it's a case of working on strictly unofficial lines. Well, now"—he looked from one to the other—"who's going to tell me the story?"

"Fire ahead, Tuppence," directed Tommy. "It's your yarn."

And obediently Tuppence told it, telling the whole story from the forming of the Young Adventurers, Ltd., downwards.

Mr. Carter listened in silence with a resumption of his tired manner. Now and then he passed his hand across his lips as though to hide a smile. When she had finished he nodded gravely.

"Not much. But suggestive. Quite suggestive. If you'll excuse my saying so, you're a curious young couple. I don't know—you might succeed where others have failed. . . . I believe in luck, you know—always have. . . ."

He paused a moment, and then went on:

"Well, how about it? You're out for adventure. How would you like to work for me? Expenses paid, and a moderate salary?"

Tuppence gazed at him. "What should we have to do?" she breathed.

Mr. Carter smiled.

"Just go on with what you're doing now. FIND JANE FINN."

"Yes, but—who IS Jane Finn?"

Mr. Carter nodded gravely.

"Yes, you're entitled to know that, I think."

He leaned back in his chair, crossed his legs, brought the tips of his fingers together, and began in a low monotone:

"In the early days of 1915 a certain document came into being. It was the draft of a secret agreement—treaty—call it what you like. It was drawn up ready for signature by the various representatives, and drawn up in America—at that time a neutral country. It was dispatched to England by a special messenger selected for that purpose, a young fellow called Danvers. It was hoped that the whole affair had been kept so secret that nothing would have leaked out. That kind of hope is usually disappointed.

"Danvers sailed for England on the Lusitania. He carried the precious papers in an oilskin packet which he wore next his skin. It was on that particular voyage that the Lusitania was torpedoed and sunk. Danvers was among the list of those missing. Eventually his body was washed ashore, and identified beyond any doubt, the packet was missing!

"The question was, had it been taken from him, or had he himself passed it on into another's keeping? After the torpedo struck the ship, in the confusion attending the launching of the boats, Danvers was seen speaking to a young American girl. No one actually saw him pass anything to her, but he might have done so. It seems to me quite likely that he entrusted the papers to this girl, believing that she, as a woman, had a greater chance of bringing them safely to shore.

"But, if so, where was the girl, and what had she done with the papers? We set to work to trace her out. It proved unexpectedly difficult. Her name was Jane Finn, and it duly appeared among the list of the survivors, but the girl herself seemed to have vanished completely. Inquiries into her antecedents did little to help us. She was an orphan, and had been what we should call over here a pupil teacher in a small school out West. Her passport had ben made out for Paris, where she was going to join the staff o fa hospital. She had offered her services voluntarily, and after some correspondence they had been accepted. Having seen her name in the list of the saved from the Lusitania, the staff of the hospital were naturally very surprised at her not arriving to take up her billet, and at not hearing from her in any way.

"Well, every effort was made to trace the young lady—but all in vain. No use was made of the draft treaty—as might very easily have been done—and we therefore came to the conclusion that Danvers had, after all, destroyed it. The war entered on another phase, the diplomatic aspect changed accordingly, and the treaty was never redrafted. Rumors as to its existence were emphatically denied. The disappearance of Jane Finn was forgotten and the whole affair was lost in oblivion."

Mr. Carter paused, and Tuppence broke in impatiently:

"But why has it all cropped up again? The war's over."

"Because it seems that the papers were not destroyed after all, and that they might be resurrected today with a new and deadly significance."

Tuppence stared. Carter nodded.

"Yes, five years ago, that draft treaty was a weapon in our hands; today it is a weapon against us. It was a gigantic blunder. If its terms were made public, it would mean disaster. . . . It might possibly bring about another war—not with Germany this time! That is an extreme possibility, and I do not believe in its likelihood, myself, but that document undoubtedly implicates a number of our statesmen whom we cannot afford to have discredited in any way at the present moment. He paused, and then said quietly:

"You may perhaps have heard or read that there is Bolshevist influence at work behind present labor unrest?"

Tuppence nodded.

"That is the truth. Bolshevist gold is pouring into this country for the specific purpose of procuring a Revolution. And there is a certain man, a man whose real name is unknown to us, who is working in the dark for his own ends. The Bolsheviki are behind the labor unrest—but this man is BEHIND THE BOLSHEVIKI. Who is he? We do not know. He is always spoken of by the unassuming title of 'Mr. Brown.' But one thing is certain, he is the master criminal of this age. He controls a marvelous organization. Most of the peace propaganda during the war was originated and financed by him. His spies are everywhere."

"A naturalized German?" asked Tommy.

"On the contrary, I have every reason to believe he is an Englishman. He was pro-German, as he would have been pro-Boer. What he seeks to attain we do not know—probably supreme power for himself, of a kind unique in history. We have no clue as to his real personality. It is reported that even his own followers are ignorant of it. Where we have come across his tracks, he has always played a secondary part. Somebody else assumes the chief role. But afterward we always find that there has been some nonentity, a servant or a clerk, who has remained in the background unnoticed, and that the elusive Mr. Brown has escaped us once more."

"Oh!" Tuppence jumped. "I wonder—"

"Yes?"

"I remember in Mr. Whittington's office. The clerk—he called him Brown. You don't think—"

Carter nodded thoughtfully. "Can you describe him at all?"

"I really didn't notice. He was quite ordinary—just like anyone else."

Mr. Carter sighed in his tired manner.

"That is the invariable description of Mr. Brown! Brought a telephone message to the man Whittington, did he? Notice a telephone in the outer office?"

"No, I don't think I did."

"Exactly. That 'message' was Mr. Brown's way of giving an order to his subordinate. He overheard the whole conversation of course. Was it after that that Whittington handed you over the money, and told you to come the following day?"

Tuppence nodded.

"Yes, undoubtedly the hand of Mr. Brown!" Mr. Carter paused. "Well, there it is, you see what you are pitting yourselves against? Possibly the finest criminal brain of the age. I don't quite like it, you know. You're such young things, both of you. I shouldn't like anything to happen to you."

"It won't," Tuppence assured him positively.

"I'll look after her, sir," said Tommy.

"And I'll look after you," retorted Tuppence, resenting the manly assertion.

"Well, then, look after each other," said Mr. Carter, smiling. "Now let's get back to business. There's something mysterious about this draft treaty that we haven't fathomed yet. We're been threatened with it—in plain and unmistakable terms. The revolutionary element as good as declare it's in their hands, and that they intend to produce it at a given moment. On the other hand, they are clearly at fault about many of its provisions. The government considers it as mere bluff on their part, and, rightly or wrongly, have stuck to the policy of absolute denial. I'm not so sure. There have been hints, indirect allusions, that seem to indicate that the menace is a real one. The position is much as though they had got hold of an incriminating document, but couldn't read it because it was in cipher—but we know that the draft treaty wasn't in cipher—couldn't be, in the nature of things—so that won't wash. But there's something. Of course, Jane Finn may be dead for all we know—but I don't think so. The curious thing is that they're trying to get information about the girl from us."

"What?"

"Yes. One or two little things have cropped up. And your story, little lady confirms my idea. They know we're looking for Jane Finn. Well, they'll produce a Jane Finn of their own—say at a pensionnat in Paris." Tuppence gasped, and Mr. Carter smiled. "No one knows in the least what she looks like, so that's all right. She's primed with a trumped-up tale, and her real business is to get as much information as possible out of us. See the idea?"

"Then you think"—Tuppence paused to grasp the supposition fully—"that it was as Jane Finn that they wanted me to go to Paris?"

Mr. Carter smiled more wearily than ever.

"I believe in coincidences, you know," he said.

Kills Self so He Can Do Good in New World

New York.—Convinced that in the world beyond the grave he could do more good than on earth, Hubert Devaney, forty, a Spiritualist, killed himself in his home here. Devaney was employed as night watchman of Dreamland park, of which his brother, Orris, is manager, and nightly, according to the police, went into a trance and when he came out declared he had talked with spirits. Several times he offered what he said were messages from his brother's deceased sons.

Devaney left two letters for his brother, one asking Orris to pay a $1 loan. In the other he said: "If it is true that there is another life waiting for us all beyond the grave in that other world, I am convinced that I can do more good there than here. Good-by and good luck to all."

Wonderful Parade Opens Annual Raisin Pageant

Fresno, Calif.—The 15th annual Raisin Day celebration was ushered in here by one of the greatest parades ever seen in California. An unusual array of beautiful floats, said to have cost $60,000, featured the long march. Handsome trophies were awarded for the best floats and marching delegations. One division of the parade was given over to the allegorical spectacle "From the Garden of Eden to the Garden of the Sun."

English "Useful Women" Aid Men to Find Wives

Manchester, England.—"The Useful Women," an organization which is a sort of league of fairy godmothers, has started operations here. Under its guidance bachelors requiring wives, elderly gentlemen looking for some one with whom to discuss politics, brides needing advice about the trousseau, or hostesses seeking "fillers" at a dinner party, all will be assisted.

Projected Airship Service.

The project for an airship service between Spain and Argentina has progressed so far that airship stations are being erected at Seville and Buenos Aires. The stations are enormous circular sheds revolving under electric power so that an air liner may be housed safely no matter how hard the wind is blowing, or from what direction.

The ships to be used will have nine motors and carry 40 passengers, in addition to the officers and crews, and will accommodate also 11 tons of baggage and mail.

A trip is contemplated each day weekly, the westward trip occupying three days and the eastward four days and six hours.

A Small World.

Following the armistice Lieutenant Paul J. Smith of this city, now of Eldorado, Ark., went to France as a K. of C. secretary, and lived at the home of a charming French family with two daughters. After his return to the States, letters were exchanged for awhile and then gradually ceased. One day last week a letter was received inquiring whether the recipient could possibly be "Smitty" of the class of '16, Notre Dame, and, if so, to let the writer know, as he was Louis Patrick Hare, a fellow classmate, now a Paris representative of the Chicago Tribune and the husband of one of the French girls before mentioned.—Indianapolis News.

Cruel Satire.

George Ade, that incorrigible bachelor satirist, said at a wedding breakfast at the Blackstone in Chicago:

"The Greeks had a saying to the effect that there are only two happy days in marriage—the day the husband first clasps his bride to his bosom, and the day he finally lays her in the tomb."

Mr. Ade laughed.

"Palladus, the Greek poet," he went on, "elaborated this rather cleverly in a quatrain:

"In marriage are two happy things allowed:
A wife in wedding garb and in a shroud.
Who then dares say that state can be accursed
When the last day's as happy as the first?"

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health.

MANY HOUSEKEEPERS SAVE IN USING SOAP

Naphtha Helps to Loosen Dirt in Various Garments.

Solutions Will Keep Indefinitely if Covered to Prevent Evaporation—Chipped or Flaked Pieces Are Convenient.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If the supply of hot water is limited, naphtha soap may be used to good advantage with cold or lukewarm water, for the naphtha helps loosen the dirt in the clothes.

It is not economy to use a poorly made soap, which may contain free grease or an excess of lye, or both. This is sometimes the case with home-made soaps, but need not be so if good directions (for example, those that come with the commercial lye in tin cans) are carefully followed. Making a soap at home may not be good economy where the fat can be sold for use in a soap factory, the United States Department of Agriculture believes, but it may be a thrifty practice where the fat would otherwise be thrown away.

Dirt is removed more quickly and with less danger to silk, wool and all colored and delicate fabrics if the soap is well dissolved in the water, rather than rubbed on. Many housekeepers use a solution or jelly made by heating one pound of soap in five gallons of water, and add enough of this to the water to make suds. A more economical solution, to be used only for white cottons and linens, is made with one-half pound of soap and one-quarter pound of soda to five gallons of water. Soap solutions keep indefinitely, if covered to prevent evaporation. Chipped or flaked soaps dissolve easily in hot water without special heating and are convenient for use in the boiler, the washing machine or for occasional fine laundering. They can be bought economically in barrel lots from laundry-supply houses or manufacturers, and some are retailed in small packages. Cake soap can be rubbed into chips on a household grater; or, if dry, put through a food chopper.

Dye soaps are purposed to clean and dye at the same time. It is safer, however, before using the dye soap, to wash the garment clean with white soap and water. The best results come from dipping a garment in a generous quantity of water to which the tint has been added. The color is always fainter after drying than while the garment is wet. The tinting is usually not permanent and the process should be repeated with each laundering.

Sandy Loams Fight Frost.

The truck farmer who selects soil in which there is a sandy component, is in less danger of damaging frosts than if he has loam or clay soil, according to the United States weather bureau. Moreover, if he keeps his land well drained of surplus moisture and free from weeds, he is less liable to the damaging effects of severe temperatures.

Experiments show there is a relation between the temperature of soil and the minimum temperature of the air, in that sandy soils store up much heat during the day and give this off at night, raising the temperature of the air above it.—Popular Science Monthly.

ALL SOUGHT GOLD

Every Age Has Felt Lure of the Precious Metal.

Well Described as One of the Most Compelling Forces in Molding of Human History.

Gold has been one of the most compelling forces in the molding of human history, says the Mentor Magazine. In all ages and all languages the word itself has been luring and commanding. In the second chapter of Genesis, the land of Havilah, "where there is gold," is mentioned. The Ark of the Covenant was extensively ornamented with gold. Solomon's throne was of gold, and, when the queen of Sheba visited him, it was flanked by soldiers bearing "two hundred targets of beaten gold." The Three Wise Men of the East, who followed the star of Bethlehem, bore golden gifts. In Revelation the Apostle John pictures the heavenly city as one of golden streets.

Gold has usually been the lure of the venturesome. Jason and his Argonauts set sail from Sicily to the farther shore of the Black sea to bring back the golden fleece. In later times, Philip the Good, duke of Burgundy, banded his knights into the famous Order of the Golden Fleece.

Propertius, whose life covered roughly the 50 years preceding the birth of Christ, wrote: "This is indeed the golden age. The greatest rewards come from gold; by gold, love is won; by gold, faith is destroyed; by gold, justice is bought. The law follows the track of gold, while modesty will soon follow it, when love is gone."

Marcus Crassus, the Roman general, was so eager for the gold of the Parthians that he led his son and 11 legions into disastrous defeat. As he lay dead the Parthians poured molten gold into his gaping mouth.

No symbol has so pervaded history as the gold ring. The wedding ring has always been of gold. The rulers of Venice used to toss a wedding ring into the sea, thus consecrating the union of Venice and the Adriatic sea. Wedding rings of the Seventeenth century bore the motto, "The wife will be subject to the man." Hannibal ended his life with a poison ring.

When one pope wished to reward a queen for her pious work he presented her with a cluster of roses and buds worked in pure gold.

The caliph of Bagdad was inaugurated by throwing over his head a golden veil, strongly scented with musk.

The lure of gold more than the desire for knowledge led to the discovery and conquest of America. Pizarro reduced the native population of Peru from 15,000,000 to 8,000,000 in his quest for gold. Montezuma, king of the Aztecs in Mexico, sealed his doom when he let Cortez, the Spanish conqueror, know of a great amount of gold he had.

In all times the dream of transmuting baser metals to gold has been a dream of man. Alchemy, a black art that swayed king and commoner alike, only ceased to exist in the Eighteenth century when James Price, a distinguished amateur chemist, believed that he had discovered the secret. He presented some of his manufactured gold to George IV, but when called upon to demonstrate his process to a committee of the scientists, drank laurel water and died almost immediately.

What do you know about "motor oil vitality"?

Do you know why some oils get thin and "go dead" quicker than others? It's all a matter of proper refining or, better yet, distillation.

Sunoco Motor Oil has tremendous vitality because every type is wholly distilled. Most oils are not pure, because they are compounds of light oil and gummy "cylinder stock" which is not a good motor lubricant and causes carbon. Sunoco is the only wholly distilled oil in all types.

You wouldn't put dirty water in your battery. You use distilled water. Use

SUNOCO
THE DISTILLED OIL

You'll get more power, more mileage, smoother motor performance and more fun out of driving. It lasts longer and is the most economical oil for any car.

Go to the dealer that displays the Sunoco sign. You'll find he knows a lot about lubrication. Our booklet, "What's Happening Inside Your Motor," will surely interest you. Let us send you a copy.

RUM SHOP AT SEA

Investors Sought for Project Launched In London.

That the operations of bootleggers and those taking a chance to make easy money dealing in contraband liquors, is not confined to United States territory is evidenced by a scheme recently unearthed in London in which a fund was raised for a whiskey selling campaign on the high seas to be directed by Lieutenant Colonel Bart, former counsel at Naples.

A circular was issued inviting subscription of $12.50 or more to send 10,000 cases of liquor to foreign ports on a private ship under sealed orders within a month.

The baronet said he already had arranged for 5000 cases and guarantees to return invested money plus 20 per cent interest within 60 days.

The minimum investment purchases one case of whiskey in bond note which is not subject to tax since it is for foreign consumption.

The circular carries illustrations of a newspaper clipping describing how a British skipper made $1,000,000 selling whiskey on the American coast.

It also states that Hartwell received a guarantee of $50,000 that the goods would be accepted and paid for twenty miles off shore of unnamed destination. It declares that plans were made to send "aboard" at least 10,000 cases monthly. "This means a large fortune wherein you can participate without risk," the circular continues.

"This business is perfectly legal and quite safe," Hartwell is quoted as telling the Daily Express. "I am not prepared to reveal the destination of liquor. Somewhere beyond any territorial waters is sufficient address. It amounts to the fact that I am setting up a wholesale whiskey shop on the high seas. The profits to investors would amount to 20 per cent in sixty days."

The story caused a sensation and probably will be discussed in commons next week. The government has indicated that parlimentary commission which now is investigating the situation has found a solution permitting the United States searching rights within a twelve-mile zone.

Magazine Swindler.

It is said that a slick magazine swindler has been working in territory about our neighboring counties and in all probability he will put in an appearance here, if he is not apprehended.

He is supposed to be soliciting subscriptions for Good Housekeeping and offers Pyrex as a premium. Of course, he takes a deposit on account and gives what looks like a receipt, nicely printed. This is absolutely of no value. He has no authority to solicit whether for the magazine or for the Pyrex ware. Sometimes he is associated with a supposed "District Manager," who is just as much of a faker as the agent. The best plan to follow is not to give subscriptions or make purchases from strangers. Transact business only with those whom you know and send subscriptions through a local resident.

HIGHWAY POLICE.

Organization is Now Complete With Personnel of 125.

Paul D. Wright, Secretary of the State Highway Department has announced that plans have been completed for the inauguration of "The Department of Highways Police" and that this patrol will be on the highways in the very near future to see to it that the provisions of the motor laws are complied with.

The new police force will begin operations with 125 men, each of whom will receive $100 per month and expenses. The force will be distinctly uniformed and will be mounted on motorcycles. Details of the uniform are now being decided upon. It will be such, however, that members of the force will be instantly recognized.

"For reasons of economy, to secure a force of efficient as possible and of high morale," said Secretary Wright, "the department of highways has asked Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of the Pennsylvania State Police, to organize the department of Highways police. The State police training school will be used as a training school for the motormen. At this school they will be given thorough instructions in the motor laws of Pennsylvania and will be perfected in the use of motorcycles. A large number of applications for these positions has already been received, and the department is now mailing blank forms to these men. Similar forms will be mailed to all future applicants.

"The department of highways seeks to enlist young men who are skilled motor cycle riders and who have a high moral character."

The police force, it is expected will be at work the latter part of August.

Major Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of the Pennsylvania State Police, has forwarded to all members of the constabulary a copy of the no-parking rule and he has instructed State policemen to enforce the provisions of the highway secretary's order that under no conditions may any vehicle be parked, for any reason whatever, on the improved portion of the highways.

NEW TRAFFIC RULES OBSERVED

Motorists Generally Co-Operating With Secretary Wright.

The rules and regulations relative to motor traffic on the State highways, issued recently by Secretary Paul D. Wright, seem to have met with the approval of motorists generally and their observance is already much in evidence, particularly on the Blossburg-Trout Run road.

The route is favored by campers and picnickers and, until Secretary Wright's regulation forbidding parking on a State highway, a great many parties, stopping to enjoy a dinner in the woods, left motor cars blocking half the roadway, thus making it in places a oneway thoroughfare. Other of the new traffic rules were violated, such as passing on the hills etc. However, a trip over this portion of the Trail last Sunday disclosed a general observance of the new regulations on the part of motorists, which adds not a little to the pleasure derived from motoring over this unsurpassed scenic highway and reduces to a minimum the danger of motor accidents.

The traffic situation is engaging the attention of authorities everywhere and ways and means of improving it are being rapidly developed. Strict observance of rules and regulations by all drivers will go a long way toward relieving the confusion and danger of accident that would otherwise obtain.

TOURIST BUSINESS PAYS.

The tourist business pays in France perhaps better than in the so-called "tourist" centers, such as Switzerland and parts of Italy.

France is the magnet which attracts more Americans than any other country and with the least effort. In fact, many visitors finish by thinking that the French do little to draw tourists to their sunny shores, but they come back every year. It is as true today as years ago that every American has two countries—his own and France.

During the month of May alone 77 passenger boats left New York for the Old World, each one with about 300 first-class and 500 second-class passengers, making a total of about 60,000 Americans, four-fifths of whom were tourists.

One-half of the number landed in France at Cherbourg or Le Havre. The other half is certain to come to France after visiting England, Belgium or Italy. And one can safely say that France is the place of the longest sejour. All of which means that France is where the most dollars are dropped.

Statisticians have recently calculated that every American leaves about 33 per cent of his total expenditures to the French merchants, which in a good season represents about $75,000,000.

Deer Killed by Auto.

As F. C. Ludden, of Olean, was driving along the State highway below Mina about 12 o'clock on a recent night, a deer suddenly bounded from the bushes on the bank directly in front of the car. Struck by the big Chandler sedan, it fell with hips broken and Mr. Ludden was at a loss to know just what to do with it. He decided to find the game warden so he drove to town and with Policeman Ridgway, got Constable Evans out of bed, took him down to the scene of the collision. Finding that the animal was hurt beyond recovery, it was dispatched and brought to Hoh's meat market, where it was dressed. It was a small doe, amply provided with milk for her young, which may or may not be old enough to survive.

With deer so plenty and so tame through this section, it is really a wonder that more of them are not hit by cars while blinded by the headlights.—Potter Journal.

MILLIONS SAVED TO STATE.

Governor Makes Accounting To People of Pennsylvania.

In a statement issued last week, the first since all the bills passed by the 1923 legislature were acted upon, Governor Pinchot declared that a saving of more than $10,000,000 in appropriation items has been accomplished, through use of the veto or otherwise.

The governor said he wanted to report to the people of Pennsylvania that he had kept his campaign pledge to make appropriations meet the estimated revenue, and unless the estimated income should fall short "we shall be able to say at the end of the present two years that Pennsylvania has lived within its income and that the policy of pay as you go is in full swing."

Governor Pinchot said the administration had to meet an inherited deficit of $20,000,000 from previous administrations and provide an additonal $18,000,000 with only $16,000,000 of new revenue. Net appropriations made by previous legislatures were $130,934,980 which added to the unexpected balances of appropriations made by previous legislatures gave the State a total appropriation liability of 158,014,896, the governor pointed out.

According to the auditor general's estimates the State's income for the next two years will be $140,000,000, including $16,000,000 derived from the emergency net profits and gasoline taxes. In addition the State will borrow $1,000,000 authorized by law, to pay current indebtedness the city of Philadelphia owes the State $150,000 for taxes and $300,000 of new revenue is expected from the boxing commission, making the total expected revenue $141,450,000, the governor said.

By subtracting the income from the appropriation liabilties "we find that appropriations made by the last session of the legislature exceed probable income by $16,564,896," the governor declared. "To make both ends meet at the end of two years, this sum of sixteen and a half million dollars must be saved by veto of appropriations items, by economies, or by postponing the expenditure of items we can do without for two years."

—In Potter county there are today many settlers living who are to be congratulated on the ripe old age they have attained. Among the latest to have a birthday is Mrs. Mary Hatch, of Oswayo, who has just celebrated her 102nd anniversary. She was born in Paris, Oneida county, 1821, was married in 1842 and in 1852 came to live in Potter county. She has an alert mind, can read and talk on current topics and can recite poetry learned in school days. Her husband has been dead since the Civil war and she raised her children, five of them, and is now living with one of them in Oswayo.

LEGISLATION FOR VETERANS.

Program Dealing With Disabled Veterans for Next Congress.

The Disabled American Veterans of the World War are preparing a comprehensive program for adjusted compensation, rehabilitation, hospital care and insurance which will be pressed upon Congress when it convenes in December. The program is based upon recommendations adopted at the recent convention of the organization at Milwaukee.

The proposals provide a rating of total permanent disability for veterans who have had hospital care for twelve consecutive months, and that all veterans so rated shall receive the same family allowance as given to veterans' bureau trainees.

An effort will be made also to have all veterans recommended for permanent total disability rating carried on this roll temporarily, pending final award. Total disability rating will be sought for men entitled to training that has been declared not feasible, and a rating of 50 percent permanent disability will be asked for men discharged from hospitals with diagnosis of arrested or quiescent tuberculosis.

Amendment of civil service laws will be proposed to place disabled veterans who attain a passing grade in an examination at the head of the eligible list.

The program would make women veterans who are ill or in need eligible to enter any home maintained by the government for veterans, with provision for a separate home for them when their number warrants. The benefits of the veterans' bureau act also are sought for the bureau's nurses having bedside contact with patients.

Hospital treatment for all veterans, regardless of the origin of their disability, is urged, with extension of the three-year period of presumption for tubercular and neuro-psychiatric disabilities.

Removal of the time limit on application for compensation and permission for any applicant to appear before the rating board in person at government expense, are asked, and the same privilege of reinstating war risk insurance is sought for veterans disabled in the service as employed by those not disabled. Retirement of disabled emergency officers on the same basis as regular army officers also is advocated.

Among other proposals is one for establishment of a committee on veterans' affairs in the house of representatives and another for codification of all veterans' laws.

British Ambassador Makes Report On Economic Conditions Here.

Sir Aukland Geddes, British Ambassador to the United States, in a memorandum made public in London recently, comments on the effects of prohibition in the United States. Referring to the condition of drys in America, of economic benefits, increased wages, and bank deposits, the memorandum says:

"So many others factors have contributed to restore economic conditions since the war that it is almost impossible to form any estimate of the extent to which prohibition has contributed to this recovery, or otherwise."

Sir Auckland says prohibition on the whole has been effective in the rural districts and in the smaller towns; but has been less effective on the Eastern Seaboard and in the vicinity of the great lakes, where powerful organizations of liquor smugglers have succeeded in effecting a regular traffic in imported intoxicants. The memorandum states that the making of home made liquors is on the decrease.

Referring to economic effects cited by drys, the memorandum says that since the adoption of prohibition a marked increase, which is computed at 40 per cent, has taken place in the amounts of savings bank deposits.

The supporters of prohibition in the United States, it adds, contends that the average wage-earner now has considerably more money to spend on the education of his children, furnishing his home, dress, sports and amusements.

First U. S. Claim Settled.

The Allied Claims Commission created to settle American war claims against Germany, made its first decision, an award of $3,316,765.92 to the International Harvester Company for property seized in Germany.

Several other awards are expected before the commission suspends its work for the summer. Some of the American officials will go to Germany later to obtain information for submission to the commission.

The decision was expedited by an agreement between the representatives of the German and American governments and was virtually a consent decree. The award, made in restitution of cash assets of subsidiaries of the International Harvester Company, seized by the German government in German banks, bears interest of 5 per cent., according to the terms of the treaty of Berlin, from December 12, 1921. No brief contesting the International Harvester claim was filed by the German government, the facts being undisputed and Germany's liability unquestioned.

SAFETY LESSONS FOR AUTO DRIVERS

Prepared by Metro Stations, Inc., for the Information of Tioga County Motorists.

AUTOMOBILE LUBRICATION:

1.—A great majority of all work in automobile and truck repair shops is made necessary by improper or insufficient lubrication.

2.—Every make of motor vehicle has its own lubrication chart and drivers should be thoroughly familiar with charts that refer to their particular cars. There are certain lubricating rules that are general and important to be given special mention.

3.—Kind of lubricant to apply:

a. Cylinder oil in crank case and oil cups,

b. Cup grease in grease cups,

c. A good transmission oil or semi-fluid grease in transmission, (in cold weather heavy transmission oil may be thinned with cylinder oil.)

d. Transmission oil in rear axle case,

e. Transmission oil or light cup grease in universal joints.

4.—How often should different parts be lubricated?

a. If there is an oil indicator for the crank case, look at the oil level at least once each day; oftener on long runs. Oil indicator, where used, should from time to time be examined carefully to see that it does not become clogged up or stuck.

5.—Not less frequently than once each week oil spring bolts, clutch pedal, shaft, steering gear, radius rods, torque arm and other points as designated by the manufacturer.

6.—Every 500 miles, or at least once each month, oil the brake mechanism, grease the universal joints and change the oil in the crank case, transmission and differential. It is especially important to change the oil in the crank case, for a certain amount of gasoline is bound to work past the piston rings and dilute the lubricating oil. Examine withdrawn oil carefully. Do not flush out the crank case with kerosene. It is not possible to remove all the kerosene after it is once poured in and enough may remain to do harm. Kerosene cuts the oil and keeps it from lubricating the engine properly. In cold weather when you are apt to use too much gasoline it may be advisable to change oil in crank case oftener than every 500 miles.

7.—Once a month the wheels should be jacked up, bearing adjusted and greased with a gun.

8.—Every 6,000 miles, or at least once a year, the wheels should be removed and bearings repacked with grease.

9.—Investigate every squeak and make necessary adjustments, or apply oil, or both.

10.—When approaching your car after it has stood for some time, make it a habit to look on the floor or street underneath the car. If here are spots or pools of water or oil, investigate at once. Continual dripping indicates leaks or worn bushings.

Next week's lesson, "Rules of the Road."

You Can't See in the Dark

You may have all kinds of light, from a candle to an electric bulb and yet be in darkness.

Why Not Have the True Light?

Jesus said: "I am the light of the world; He that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." (John 8:12): "That was the True Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John 1:9.

WHY WALK IN DARKNESS?

"Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

"The entrance of Thy Word giveth light." Psa. 119:105, 130.

"This then is the mesage which we have heard of Him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all."

"If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the BLOOD OF JESUS CHRIST, His son Cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1:5, 7.

Have You This Light?

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER
WILLIAM KIMBALL,
Of Tioga Borough.

I have decided to be a candidate for County Commissioner. I would like the office for just one term, if the people see fit to give it to me. I have served one term as County Commissioner and six years as Superintendent of the County Home. The expenses in the County Home during my six year term, I think, were less than half what they have been since and less than ever before. My term as Commissioner was a great saving to the taxpayers, if any one will take the pains to look it up. I worked for the county and not for myself. I will not make a canvass, but will be very thankful to the voters of Tioga county who see fit to vote for me."

THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1923.

There are at present in the United States 287 cities of 25,000 or more each, with a combined population of 37,000,000. Forty years ago it was 3,500,000.

A New York grand jury recently indicted William H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, on charges of grand larceny and forgery and then handed down a presentment calling for a legislative investigation of the league's activities since 1913, when Anderson became superintendent. Anderson entered a plea of not guilty and was held in $5,000 bail to cover all the indictments.

"Germany should give up the illusion that any help is coming from America," declared ex-Premier Lerchenfeld, of Bavaria, in a speech before newspaper publishers at Munich. He has just returned after an extended tour of the United States. Among the Germans in the United States, he declared, there are lacking racial consciousness and common faith. The Garman element today is all American, he found.

There is a new boomerang in the air. The old style, thrown by savages on the other side of the earth, was a little piece of wood. If it failed to hit the mark at which it was thrown, it came back and fell at the feet of its owner—sometimes. The new boomerang is a flying machine, with no man in it, controlled and driven and steered by wireless. The French army has sent a flying machine from one city to another and brought it back to the place whence it started. And wireless steered the machine. The same wireless could have dropped TNT bombs on the city to which the machine was sent.

Rumors that Joseph F. Guffey, of Pittsburg, Democratic National Committeeman from Pennsylvania, would seek re-election, and that his opponent would be Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, of Philadelphia, has brought forth the following pertinent comment from the Bellefonte Watchman: "We are of the opinion that Joe Guffey should not be re-elected national committeeman from Pennsylvania, but it is folish for the Hon. Eugene C. Bonniwell to think that he can succeed. Judge Bonniwell might make a very satisfactory representative of our party in the national committee, but he has gone too often to the well with his pitcher."

The dry forces in Congress, who for several years have exercised undisputed control over the legislative machinery handling prohibition bills in both senate and house, are looking forward with some concern to the situation which seems likely to confront them when the next session meets in December. By a combination of circumstances, the men now in line for chairman of the senate and house judiciary committee, which have charge of prohibition measures, are Senator Brandegee, of Connecticut, and Representative Graham, of Pennsylvania, both of whom voted against the eighteenth amendment and since have steadfastly refused to be counted among the drys.

THE WRONG PICTURE.

It seems ridiculous to hear politicians and labor agitators get up and tear the air expounding on the fight between labor and capital. To hear their speeches and public utterances, an uninformed person would have a vision of the wealthy men in this nation hiding behind breastworks of money bags and fighting off starving millions who are trying to scale this wall of gold.

In the next breath, we read in our daily papers that a rich employer in New York has turned over his clothing business to a few employes. Automatically these employes must become the hated capitalists and take their places behind the barriers of gold, which in turn the workmen they hire will strive to tear down.

Is not this the wrong picture to flash constantly before the eyes of millions? Is not a capitalist any individual who has saved fifty or a hundred dollars and through wise investment, either in a peanut wagon, a bootblack stand or an industrial or government bond, caused that money to earn more dollars?

Is the man who saves one hundred dollars which he puts in a public utility or a saw mill property, where, with money contributed by hundreds of others like himself, it employs thousands of people at good wages, a bad citizen? Yet he is a capitalist just as truly as the man who invests a hundred thousand or a million dollars.

When there is removed the incentive for the man with one hundred dollars to increase that amount to one thousand and then to ten thousand dollars, and so on, there is also removed the chance of reward that is the stake for which the average able-bodied American strives.

The majority of capitalists today started as hand workers, and yet, according to the radical politicians and labor agitators, the salvation of the country lies in denying to others the chance which these men had to benefit themselves and, incidentally, humanity in general through the modern conveniences they have given to the humblest American citizen.

LOCAL GLEANINGS

Many Items of Interest From Nearby Towns and Neighboring Counties.

—Among the other State appropriation bills recently signed by Governor Pinchot, are the Good Samaritan Hospital, Westfield, $1,500; Coudersport Hospital, $1,500; North Tier Children's Home, Harrison Valley, $3,500.

—Fire, which it is believed was caused by tramps, totally destroyed a large barn on the Bert Gordon farm, near Elmira, last Friday morning, in which six valuable horses were burned to death. The loss is estimated at $7,000.

—Rastus C. Hoffman, of Towanda, was almost instantly killed last Sunday night when the automobile in which he was riding with Amos Walters struck the bridge at Pultney Landing, near Hammondsport, and dropped ten feet to the gulley below. Mr. Hoffman died within an hour of the accident. His companion was uninjured. Walters was placed under arrest and taken to the Bath jail.

—Three eminent citizens of Galeton-Gaines way, two doctors among them, went spearing in the low waters of Pine creek. When asked by a warden for their permits, like Simple Simon to the pieman when asked for a show down, replied: "Indeed I have not any." Consequently, they appeared before a justice and were fined. They don't care so much about that as the unmerciful "kidding" they are enduring.

—Lawrence Kohler, of near Canton, was arrested early last week on the charge of stealing an automobile tire and rim from the automobile of Robert Gleckner, while he was in camp on Tioga river. He was given a hearing before Justice Irvin at Ogdensburg last Wednesday when he pleaded guilty to the charge and in default of bail was taken to Wellsboro, where he will be tried at the next session of court.

—Edwin J. Carpenter, Jr., of Corning, a member of the State assembly from the first Steuben district and a lawyer, was held last week under $100 bail at Ithaca for a hearing in city court in that city on August 11, on a charge of driving his car while intoxicated. It is reported that three quarts of wine were found in the assembly man's car. Mr. Carpenter, who is a prominent "dry" legislator, promises to clear himself when the matter comes before the court.

—E. E. Marvin, of Harrison Valley, Harry Fish, of Wellsboro, Lee Learn, of Covington, Walter Swinley, of Westfield, R. D. and Walter G. Clark, of Westfield, all of whom hold positions as supervising teachers in this county are at Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa., for the summer term. They make the trip home each Friday evening, driving 120 miles rather than to spend the Sunday away from home. The road is all improved, most of it concrete until they reach Wellsboro and is only a five hour jaunt.—Westfield Free Press.

—Thousands of dollars in crop damage and the life of George E. Latimer, 52 years old, a well-known farmer of near Muncy, was the toll exacted by the cloudburst which broke northeast of Muncy early Sunday morning and flooded Muncy creek to a height never known since the '89 flood. Fields were innundated by the torrents of water and the Muncy State road, between the covered bridge and the Glade Run bridge at the northern entrance of the borough was covered with about 18 inches of water throughout the greater part of the day.

—The early potato crop of Pennsylvania is practically a failure. This is especially true of the Cobbler varieties in the eastern section where heavy losses resulted from a lack of moisture. The late crop of tubers shows promise and is a good stand in most sections. These are the observations of E. L. Nixon, potato specialist at the Pennsylvania State College. That farmers should prepare for regular spraying with 4-4-50 Bordeaux mixture to control late blight is the opinion of Nixon. He predicts a wet spell which is ideal for the development of the late blight.

—The Galeton Dispatch says that at Austin several men who refused to respond to summons to fight fire were lodged in jail. Others drove hastily to adjacent territory to escape the summons or hid under the bed or some convenient place. "It is not a pretty sight," says the Dispatch, "to see a dozen able-bodied young men sprinting down the street when they see the fire warden coming. During the war that kind of men were called 'slackers.'" No one courts firefighting, to be sure, but every able-bodied man should do his duty in the premises when any invader threatens his territory and his existence. Tioga County fire wardens experienced no such difficulty in drafting men to combat forest fires.

—Bids for the painting of the Wellsboro school buildings were opened by the School Board last Wednesday evening. But one bid was received, $1,174, which included labor and material. The Board considered the bid too high and rejected it.

—Forest Young and Ray Campbell, of Wellsboro, were slightly injured when the car in which they were riding, in trying to avoid hitting a parked car, skidded and ran into a bank along side the road. The accident occurred near McEwensville, Pa.

—The crack Hornell baseball team, that played two games here two weeks ago, has disbanded and the players are signing up with other teams. The payroll for the club was $1,400 per week and a $3,000 deficit is being made up by private subscriptions.

—Owen Smith and family enjoyed a motor trip to Dundee, N. Y., last Friday, where they visited Mr. Smith's sister and family. They report cherries too plentiful for pickers and red raspberries selling for 15 cents a quart in that fertile fruit country.

—A beautiful diamond was found last week by Charles Townsend while at work on the cemetery extension. The stone had evidently lain in the dirt for some time but its brilliancy was unimpaired. We understand a value of $150 has been placed on the stone.

—By paying 50 cents dues Republican women can still become charter members of the Wellsboro Unit No. 1, of the Pennsylvania State Council of Republican Women. Mrs. Lillian Stanb or Mrs. Z. H. Peters will be glad to enroll your name. All Republican women are urged to join.

—Street Commissioner Sheffer has caused safety zones to be designated on Main street. Each zone is marked by white painted strips, eight feet apart, running across Main street at each intersection to protect pedestrians. Parking angles at 45 degrees are also designated at the street corners.

—Arthur C. Edwards has moved his family here from Clearfield to reside. He has purchased the milk route of Verne Green and took possession yesterday. Mr. Edwards expects soon to occupy the store recently vacated by the Bloise Shoe Co., and will conduct a milk station in addition to carrying a complete stock of groceries.

—The borough council met in adjourned session last Monday evening with all members present. The street commissioner was instructed to build a retaining wall along Kelsey creek, on Tioga street for the protection of the Tioga street bridge. He was further directed to repair the brick pavement on Tioga street and on West avenue.

—Walter Sowry, who has had charge of the Tyoga Country Club grounds and has been engaged recently in laying out the golf course, has tendered his resignation, which was accepted at the last meeting of the Board of Directors who have placed Fred Keene, of this borough, an experienced landscape gardner, in charge of the work. Mr. Sowry, who was an expert on golf courses, came to Wellsboro from the Merrimac Valley Country Club where he had been employed for years.

—The normal July rainfall for Tioga county is reported as 2½ inches whereas the actual rainfall was 34-100 of an inch. In June we had 1.20 inches making for the two months 1.63 inches instead of the normal fall of five inches. Small wonder that fields and gardens are burned almost to a crisp. Wellsboro in particular seems to have incurred the displeasure of the rain God inasmuch as there have been local showers all about us for some days, all of which with the exception of the light rain fall of Saturday night passed us by.

—The Covington Order P. O. S. of A. held open installation Monday evening, July 23, those present from among those that were present from Wellsboro were the following: Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Mosher, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Willsey, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Ogden, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Mosher, Orin Rosancranse, S. M. Thornton, Orville Ogden. A very enjoyable time was had by all and those present voted their thanks to Covington P. O. S. of A., for their effort and join in extending their invitation to the County Convention and picnic to be held in Wellsboro in the near future.

First Baptist Church.

The pastor will be absent the greater part of the month of August. He will visit his parents and sister in St. Paul, Minn., stopping at points of interest en route.

There will, however, be morning worship and preaching in the church each Sunday of the month. Next Lord's Day Rev. Dewey Martin, pastor of the Baptist Church in Harrison Valley, will be the speaker. The Bible School will meet at the usual hour.

And on Sunday evening at 7:30 another open-air union service. The pastor of the Christian Church will bring the message, and the service will be in the nature of a welcome to this new minister.

About forty members of the Woman's Missionary Society were guests of Mrs. W. S. Mitchell at her country home near Holiday last Wednesday afternoon.

Any member of the church or congregation who has flowers or plants to spare may feel entirely free to bring them to the church for any service. The Floral Committee is always glad of such offerings and to assist in their arrangement.

Road Superintendent Get Increase.

State Highway Secretary Paul D. Wright has announced increases of salaries paid to maintenance superintendents as follows:

Class A positions carry a salary of $225 a month and head those districts which spend $200,000 to $500,000 a year; class B superintendents are those whose districts spend from $100,000 to $200,000 a year, and class C positions are in those districts which spend less than $175,000 a year and have a monthly salary of $175.

"My Wife Can Manage a Budget, But An Estate Is Different"

"My wife has a considerable amount of ability in ordinary money matters," said a business man recently.

"But I do not believe," he continued, "that she should have the responsibility of investing the funds of an estate. This is work that requires the best that experienced investment men can give.

"I am planning to leave my insurance and property in the hands of a trust company for my wife's benefit. Then she will have the certainty of an income as large as is consistent with safety, without the worry and risk of loss that otherwise might result."

We shall be glad to give you information as to how we can serve you in protecting your family's future. You can discuss such matters with us in entire confidence.

BE RID OF THAT ACHE

If you are a sufferer with lame back, backache, dizziness, nervousness and kidney disorders, why don't you try the remedy that your neighbors recommend? Ask your neighbor!

Mrs. C. R. Walker, 97 Water street, Wellsboro, says: "I am glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. I know they will do what is claimed for them. I had severe backaches and lameness across my back and hips. I didn't know what is was to be free from pain. I could hardly do my work and often had to neglect it. I suffered a great deal with dizziness and my kidneys acted irregularly. I used Doan's Kidney Pills, which I bought at the Central Pharmacy, and they helped me wonderfully, relieving the backaches and kidney trouble."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Walker had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

PLEASING WAYS TO USE MILK

Captain Explained Clearly Properties of Beverage for Building Food for Bones, Muscle and Teeth —Helps Children.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A group of club girls from Wauwatosa high school, Milwaukee county, Wisconsin, put on one of the most attractive features of the National Dairy show at St. Paul, according to reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture. These girls were under the direction of the home economics teacher of the Milwaukee county agricultural school, a former home demonstration agent, and their purpose was to show as many as possible of the pleasing ways in which milk may be used as a beverage.

The captain of the club gave little talks on the reasons why milk should be used by everybody. She explained clearly its properties as a building food for bones, teeth and muscles; how it provides energy; and why it makes children grow and helps to keep them well. The cost of each drink served was shown at current market rates, and compared with the cost of "pop." The other members of the club assisted in the talks and in preparation of the drinks. The following milk drinks were prepared by the youthful demonstrators and sold at the booth:

Cherry Milk Blossom, consisting of three tablespoonfuls of home-made cherry sirup in a half-pint glass of cold milk.

Rural Rooter's Special, half ginger ale, and half milk, with one teaspoonful of sugar to the glass, and crushed macaroons floating on top.

Milk Julep, a new name for an old drink sometimes called eggnog—a beaten egg blended with one teaspoonful of sugar and half-pint of milk, flavored with one-fourth teaspoon of vanilla.

NOT WORTH NEEDED EFFORT

Indianapolis Girls Refused to Make Physical Exertion Necessary to Pick Up That Dime.

A man was stopped a moment the other evening at the southwest corner of Washington and Pennsylvania streets by the press of traffic. He noticed three girls standing at the edge of the sidewalk, gazing silently at the pavement near where they stood.

This aroused his curiosity and he stepped over near them and saw a dime at the spot on which their eyes were glued. He advanced with the remark:

"I'll pick it up for you," and asked to whom it belonged.

"Me," said one of them.

Handing it to her, he asked:

"Why didn't you pick it up?"

"Didn't want to," she answered.

"And why didn't you pick it up?" he asked the second girl.

"Too tired," was her answer.

"And you?" addressing the third.

"Too lazy," was the response.

"What are your names?" he asked, and was answered, "Jane, Helen and Ruth."

"Well, mine's Bill. Good-night," and he sauntered on.—Indianapolis News.

Masked Goats.

At the Rowett institute, Aberdeen, Scotland, a number of goats were to be recently seen wearing what appeared to be gas masks. The masks were fitted to the horns by elastic bands, and provided with an inlet valve which admitted air, and a second valve through which the out-breathed air passed into a rubber bag. The expired air was then analyzed, the amount of heat produced by the animals giving an indication of the quantity of food being used up. The masked goats were being used in a series of experiments now being carried on at the institution in order to throw light on the question of animal nutrition, and the most economical method of stock-feeding.

To Study Habits of Whale.

The government of the Falkland islands has purchased the famous ship the Discovery, which it plans to use chiefly for research work in the south Atlantic. The ship was used by Captain Scott for the British expedition to the south polar regions from 1901 to 1904.

The chief task for which the Falkland islands government wants the Discovery is to study the habits of the whale, to ascertain the geographical limits of the stock, trace their migrations and to form some idea of their numbers and the rate of reproduction. The expedition also will do research work in oceanography, meteorology and magnetism.

Take Up Collection for Bandit.

A collection was taken up in the courtroom at Fort Worth, Tex., when John Miller, seventeen years old, a bandit, promised to go straight and received a suspended sentence. Miller gave his home as St. Louis, Mo.

ALASKANS HONOR EARLY EXPLORER

Hospital to Be Built in Memory of Hudson Stuck, Cowboy, Reporter and Clergyman.

Seattle, Wash.—The Alaskan Indian and Eskimo friends of the late Hudson Stuck, cowboy, newspaper reporter and minister, and finally missionary, explorer and author, are planning a hospital to his memory on a knoll overlooking the Yukon river, four miles inside the Arctic circle.

Archdeacon Stuck is the man who first made the ascent of Mount McKinley; or, as he called it, Mount Denali, giving it the Indian name. The official records of the climb are among the archives of the American Geographical society, of which he was a member, and to which they were turned over, on his death, two years ago, by the Episcopal church, in whose missionary service he was engaged the greater part of his life. Stuck, who was also a Fellow of the Royal Geographical society, has related the story of his perilous adventure in "The Ascent of Denali," which was published in 1914.

Distinguished Ancestor.

The blood of Hendrik Hudson flowed through the veins of Hudson Stuck. It was probably from this distinguished ancestor that he inherited the love of adventure, which carried him all the way from cowboy, post rider and newspaper man in Texas, to his life work for the Episcopal church in the frozen north. An archdeacon of the Yukon, Stuck, in 1917, established St. Stephen's hospital at Fort Yukon, and through that unpretentious institution, was instrumental in saving the lives of hundreds of Indians and Eskimos, and not a few white men of a dozen nationalities, to whom the little log hospital was the one haven of safety and succor within a radius of a thousand miles of Arctic wilderness.

During his career in Alaska, Stuck covered literally thousands of miles in his journeys by dog-sled and motor launch and not infrequently afoot, ministering to his charges, extending a helping hand to all in need, and noting by the way those details of life and adventure which, in "Ten Thousand Miles With a Dog-sled," "Voyages on the Yukon and Its Tributaries," and "A Winter Circuit of Our Arctic Coast," have been read by thousands of lovers of the open road and the upward trail. Long before his fame as an explorer and an author had spread over the civilized world he had become known throughout the territory for his humanitarian work, and it is chiefly as the missionary and friend of the native that he is known in that region today.

Stuck's Grave Indian Shrine.

When he died two years ago and was buried, according to his wish, in the native graveyard not far from the hospital and church which he had established, the natives erected a cross over the hillock, which is today their shrine. Stuck is to them a "dry wood" man. Among the Siwash, the wise man in making camp selects, instead of green or soggy timber, that which is dry and seasoned and will therefore burn long and furnish both light and heat. So, in the Takuah language of the Yukon the natives praying at the grave of Stuck say of him, that "His light burns bright and won't go out."

Not content with the cross which marks his grave, the natives at a recent meeting determined to enlarge and improve the hospital which he founded and make it a permanent memorial to him. There were Eskimos, Indians, trappers, traders and miners present at the meeting, as well as representatives from the adjacent posts of the Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, Methodist and Baptist churches, in all about thirty or forty men, and within a few minutes $1,760 was subscribed toward the fund of $25,000 necessary for the purpose. Since then, according to Dr. Grafton Burke, the physician in charge at Fort Yukon, contributions received in sums of from 25 cents to $10, and coming mostly from the natives, have swelled the amount to $9,000. It is expected that the friends and admirers of Hudson Stuck, those who have read and enjoyed his books, and his former associates in the geographical societies of the United States and England, will speedily make up the balance of the fund.

BANK PAYS OLD CHECK

Bearer Had Carried It in His Pocket Nine Years.

After carrying a check in his pocket for nine years, William Hayes of Colusa, Calif., presented it for payment at a local bank. The check was given to Hayes by C. Cecil, a resident of Colusa, by whom Hayes was employed.

Hayes carried the check and Cecil's accounts did not balance because of the check. A few days ago Hayes decided to present the check at the bank. When asked by the bank if the check was good, Cecil replied, "As good as gold. Shoot it through."

Used Business Terms.

Two Columbus business men were conversing about a business rival. They were pointing out the qualities that gave him the knack for making money.

"Few men show such keen business instinct," one remarked.

"Is he so full of it?" the other asked.

"Full of it," was the reply. "Why, he even refers to his 'better half' as his 50 per cent preferred."

Wouldn't Be Wasted.

Father invested in a fancy shirt that proved to be much too short in the sleeves.

"Never mind, papa; don't worry. I'll soon be big enough to wear it," cried Bobby, coming to the rescue.—Exchange.

Profit in Easter Lilies.

A Mississippi farm woman told at a recent short course at the Agricultural and Mechanical college of Mississippi how she had made $150 this year from a single Easter lily given to her nine years ago. With the help and advice of the county extension agent that lily was planted and grown out of doors until, according to reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture, a regular business has been built up, with a steady demand for the lilies.

KEEP WATER VESSELS CLEAN

Coolers Should Be of Such Material as Porcelain or Enameled Ware—Scald Often.

The greatest care is required to keep household water vessels clean and in good condition. Water coolers should be of some material, such as porcelain or enameled ware, which is easily kept clean. They should be scalded at frequent intervals. The ice, if it comes in contact with the water, should be of known quality. Doubtful ice should be kept from contact with the water. Many families cool drinking water by putting it in the ice box in glass fruit jars or bottles.

Where it is believed or known that the water supply is not pure, a filter should be used. If a filter is used, every precaution should be taken to keep it clean and in good condition, United States Department of Agriculture specialists suggest. An earthenware filter may be cleaned by thorough scrubbing with a brush. Then it should be placed in a pan or kettle of water and boiled. A small piece of wood should be placed under the jar to prevent direct contact with the heated bottom of pan.

Worldly Wise.

A girl of high school age walked into a North side grocery recently, chewing gum with an apparent relish, and tossing her head saucily.

"What will it be for you?" asked a clerk.

"Well, gimme a can of beans, 'n a coupla pounds o' potatoes, 'n a head o' cabbage, 'n I guess that's all," was her order.

"How in the world did you remember all that?" a bystander asked.

"Oh, I don't live very far from here. I keep it in my noodle."—Indianapolis News.

7,000 Pigeon Racers.

To show the interest which has been aroused in pigeon racing, there are now more than 7,000 members of racing pigeon clubs in this country who run their lofts against their rivals regularly, says Nature Magazine of Washington, D. C. Despite unfavorable weather conditions, the birds will make rapid progress toward their home goals after they start in a race. When the wind is high and strong, they fly very close to the ground, where they are best sheltered from the elements.

Ornithological Quest.

The biological survey and the Bishop museum of Honolulu are sending a scientific expedition to explore the Hawaiian islands national bird reservation. The company will make collections and gather information concerning the bird life of the reservation, which consists of a dozen or more islands, reefs and shoals stretching westward from the Hawaiian archipelago proper for more than 2,500 miles toward Japan. The Navy department is to furnish a vessel for the use of the party.

Alliteration Record.

Miss Lora Whitmore, register of deeds, comes of a family of nine children. And the names in the family are all very similar. When the first three children arrived they were named in succession, Dora, Cora and Nora. This caused some comment in the neighborhood and a friend of the parents said: "That works all right for three children, but you are liable to run out of names that sound similar, if you have any more." Apparently this put the parents on their mettle, because they solved the problem nicely. The next addition to the family was a pair of twins, a boy and a girl. So they were named Flora and Flora. After this there were four other girls born and they were promptly named Ora, Zora, Lora and Clora. If any family can beat this record for alliteration, step up and prove it!—Columbus (Kan.) Advocate.

Few Livonians Left.

There is a movement in Finland and Esthonia for the preservation of the tiny group of Livs, numbering about 2,000, and living in 14 villages at the extreme northern end of the Courland peninsula in Esthonia, who represent all that is left of the semi-Asiatic people who gave their name to the old Russian province of Livonia. These folk speak a language closely allied to Finnish and Magyar, and ethnologists and philologists are anxious to have them saved from extinction.

For 193 years Livonia was a part of the Russian empire until it was overrun by the Germans in 1917. In 1918 Livonia, Esthonia and Courland formed a joint Baltic state.

Fat and Wedded Best Risks.

New York.—Married men are a better risk than bachelors, says the president of a New York bonding company. He says that Chinamen are the best risks of all. Fat men, profane men and men with a hobby are classed as good risks; they seldom go wrong.

Bride Prefers Death to Husband.

Hagerstown, Md.—Declaring that she would rather die than live with her husband, Rosalena Eller Wolkenstein, sixteen years old, a bride of a month, hurried out of the police station, after her husband had been acquitted of charges of beating her. The young wife declared her mate struck her in the eye and twisted her wrists. The husband denied the charge and said he loved his wife despite her temper.

They Go Anywhere in Their Smooth-Riding, Able Jewett

YOU and YOUR family, also, can go anywhere in your Jewett. It is serving blithely everywhere—doing more than is usually expected of a car—because of its ample power and rugged construction.

Jewett owners enjoy big car riding ease. Jewett's springs are 80 per cent of the wheelbase. Jewett weighs 2805 pounds—200 pounds more than any car of its size. Restful motion over rough roads, as in far more costly cars.

Jewett is the only car of its class built by a maker of finest quality cars. This means Paige-built motor, Paige-type clutch and transmission, Paige-Timken axles front and rear. Ball-bearing steering spindles. All-steel universal joints with sealed-in oil—not grease—good for 15,000 miles without oiling. Six-inch-deep frame, beautiful, well-built bodies.

And Jewett STAYS GOOD! High-pressure, hollow crank-shaft oiling system forces 2 gallons of oil per minute through all main and connecting rod bearings. Wear is long postponed; smooth silence is Jewett's assurance for thousands of miles.

Women love to drive the Jewett. They don't have to learn how. Simple, silent gear-changing with a bare 3-inch movement of the lever. Clutch is gentle and gradual. Brakes work easily, positively.

The 47,000 Jewett owners drive from 2 to 60 miles an hour in high—a crawling pace in traffic, flashing speed in the open. Up most any hill in high, fast or slow [a terrific test]. Accelerate from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds in high gear. [Try it with any other car.] Thousands of Jewett Six owners are glad they graduated from fours.

Little wonder that Jewett has won warm appreciation as a family car. And never has it been in such great demand as now. A demonstration will delight your family. No obligation, of course.

MOTHER:—"Why didn't we ever find this place before?"
DAD:—"We never had a car that could make that sand hill until we got the Jewett."

STATE INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS.

Total of 188 Fatalities Out of 17,621 Accidents Reported for June.

One hundred and eighty-eight fatal industrial accidents during the month of June were reported to the bureau of workmen's compensation of the State department of labor and industry, according to the monthly report filed recently. There were 17,621 accident reports received during the month, the largest number for any month this year, although the number of deaths was the least for any month of the first six. A total of 1276 deaths and of 100,421 accidents was reported for the first half of the year. These involved total payments of $4,855,630 for compensation.

Eighty-two of the month's fatalities among industrial workers resulted from accidents at mines, seventy-two were classed as industrial and thirty-four were among public serving workers. Allegheny county had twenty-seven fatal accidents; Schuylkill, seventeen; Luzerne, sixteen, and Philadelphia and Lackawanna, twelve each; Cambria and Washington, nine each; Westmoreland, eight; Fayette, seven; Lehigh, four; Berks and Clearfield, three each; Dauphin, Franklin, McKean, Northampton, Venango and York, two each, and Bedford, Chester, Bucks, Columbia, Crawford, Erie, Lancaster, Lycoming and Warren, one each.

During the month compensation awarded for permanent injuries was $230,188. Awards were made for the loss of twelve legs, seven arms, twenty-three hands, fourteen feet, fifty-one eyes and 103 miscellaneous cases. Since the compensation act became effective in 1916 there have been 19,332 fatal accidents, which resulted in the awarding of $40,365,380, of which $13,527,767 has been paid.

Husband Becomes Father-In-Law.

The following matrimonial mix-up that obtains in two families now residents of Corning, and resulting relationships, may be solved if you read carefully the article, taken from a New York paper:

"A bride who was until recently her present husband's stepmother and her present father-in-law's wife was married last Tuesday by Deputy City Clerk, James J. McCormick, of the Marriage License Bureau. The name of the bride was Leonora Wilhelmina Breidenbach, who arrived from Holland a week ago. She was married to Wilhelm Van Beck, Jr., a sculptor, of Corning. The VanBecks have established homes within a block of each other at Corning.

"As Mrs. VanBeck, Jr., was until Sept. 18 last her husband's stepmother, the granting of a marriage license was delayed last week, while Corporation Counsel Geo. P. Nicholson carefully went over the divorce papers in the case, which were handed him by the elder VanBeck and the present bride of the junior Van Beck.

"Her former husband, Wilhelm VanBeck, a painter, and Hendrika Stephania Hoving were married at the same time. They all came from Holland, and the two women, in obtaining the marriage licenses, gave their addresses as the Travelers' Aid Society, 46 Lexington avenue. Mr. VanBeck and Mr. VanBeck, Jr., gave their addresses as 277 and 299 Walnut street, respectively, Corning, N. Y. It being explained that the artists had provided these homes for future use of themselves and their brides.

"The elder VanBeck is 56 years old and his bride is 45. The younger Mrs. VanBeck gave her age as 42 years, and Mr. VanBeck, Jr., is 30 years old."

VETOES ROAD BILL.

Pinchot Disapproves Measure Adding 725 Miles to State Highway System.

Governor Pinchot has announced that he has vetoed the Thomas "omnibus" road bill which added 725 miles, in the various counties of the State, to the State highway system, his avowed reason being lack of funds. The governor said, that according to estimates of the department of highways, the maintenance of this additional mileage would be approximately $1,500,000 annually and that while legislators practically were unanimous for the bill they should have provided the revenues necessary for doing the work the bill requires."

"The funds for highway maintenance purposes derived from motor license fees are inadequate to properly maintain the mileage we have now," the governor said. "They were reduced still further when the highway department had to be cut a million dollars in the general appropriation bill because the legislature raised only $16,000,000 of new revenue instead of the $18,000,000 required for the common schools.

"It has been argued that failure to sign this bill would endanger the approval of the $50,000,000 bond issue by the people next fall. I refuse to believe that the people would punish themselves by declining to authorize a great addition to the mileage of permanent good roads in Pennsylvania merely because the shortage of funds and lack of revenue make it impossible to give improved maintenance on less than one per cent. of the road outside the primary system which still remain to be improved."

BRITISH REPARATION NOTE.

Suggests Procedure for Ultimate Good of All—Speculation Rife.

While the exact contents of the promised British note on reparations, sent to Paris last week, has not been divulged, the French press is freely discussing the British comments and dispatches relative thereto.

The latest summaries of the note's contents, crediting the best-informed circles as sources of information, concur in the essential points. These include the appointment of an international commission of experts to study Germany's ability to pay; a suggestion to Germany that in return for cessation of passive resistance Great Britain would request France to permit recovery of German industry by reducing to a minimum the forces of occupation in the Ruhr, and the purpose of submitting the entire reparation problem finally to a conference of plenipotentiaries who might meet in Brussels.

The British note on reparations sent to the allied capitals also was delivered to the Washington government last Saturday as a matter of information. State department officials said the text would not be made public nor could the subject be discussed. The note came through the American embassy in London.

It was said officials had not had opportunity to study the note in detail, but it was indicated that when such opportunity had been afforded no announcement could be expected, in view of the British government's injunction to strict secrecy.

Europe Cannot Be Saved by Diplomacy; She Must Go Back to Hard Work

By HENRY J. ALLEN, Former Governor of Kansas.

Europe cannot be saved by diplomacy. She must go back to hard work. It is impossible to place all Europe in one category. Some parts are very bad, and there are also several bright spots. But I brought away a gloomy picture of the stirring of new ambitions and the forming of new ententes.

It is suggestive of the old system of alliances. It is evident in the Near East and the Balkans. It is noticeable in the French courting of Poland and Czechoslovakia and the British advances toward Italy. There is the suggestion that trouble may impend again from the same reactions that brought on the late war. The powers are playing for position.

Southern Russia has improved because the peasants have returned to work on the land. Great Britain is giving Palestine a government probably better than that it enjoyed under Solomon or David. I found Egypt the most prosperous spot abroad. Greece is reviving admirably from the Near East debacle, and France is forcing Germany to make a reasonable reparations offer and carry it out.

America cannot do much now to help Europe. We should join The Hague court, but the time has not yet arrived to join the league of nations. I agree with President Harding regarding our attitude toward Europe. We should seek to be helpful when European questions arise which affect us, or which threaten world civilization, but we must not get mixed up in European politics.

The Courage and the Vision and the Clean Love of the Mother

By VISCOUNTESS ASTOR, in World's Work.

I AM striving to take into public life what any man gets from his mother and most men get from their wives if they chose wisely—the courage, and the vision, and the clean love of a mother. That quality has done more than anything in the world to make up civilization.

Men know that, and we women know it, too; and we feel that if we can get a little of that into public life, that is our only contribution. That is the only thing we have got. We are not coming just as women. Women are of no more use than men. It is what we bring that is going to be useful, and a great many of us think that we have more moral courage sometimes than men. Women know that physical courage is easy enough, but moral courage takes a bit of doing. We feel that we have got moral courage, and we know that we have got a clean love, and we know that we have got to be unselfish. If we were not unselfish, mankind would not be here. That is the mothers' contribution to life.

We are bound to be unselfish, and we think we have got a great vision. It is that which we ask men to accept. That is all we want to do. We don't want to go into politics because of ourselves. We know that public life, just as much as private life, needs this mothering thought. When men are blundering around, sometimes a woman sees as quick on public things as she does on private. Men think we women talk so much. It is true, we do; but even then we don't tell them half we know.

"The Worst, but Only One of Many Discriminations Against Middle West"

By H. C. KESSINGER, Illinois State Senator.

Abolish Pittsburgh plus. Stop federal aid funds. Build St. Lawrence waterway. Elect midwestern man speaker of house, midwestern representation on federal reserve board (credits), and on interstate commerce commission (rates). Save the interurban lines. Regulate the railroads without destroying them.

"Pittsburgh plus" means Chicago minus. You can buy steel made in South Chicago, haul it in your own truck to your factory or farm, and on this steel made in Illinois you have to pay the freight from Pittsburgh.

It is the worst but only one of the many discriminations against the Middle West. We need a Middle West consciousness and solidarity; an aroused and organized public opinion to advance a Mid-West program for justice to our people in the matter of the making of tariffs, the levying of taxes, the spending of public funds, and the regulating of freight rates.

All federal aid funds are expensive for the Middle West. We get back only a small part of the money we contribute. Pittsburgh plus cost our part of the country more than $30,000,000 last year for fictitious freight rates on steel manufactured in the Chicago district.

Everywhere in Europe America Is Regarded as the Hope of the World

By C. S. MAC FARLAND, Federal Council of Churches of Christ.

Everywhere in Europe, from the Baltic sea to the Black, America is regarded as the hope of the world. Indeed, the most striking moral and psychological phenomenon in Europe, today, is the persistence of this hope. Our brothers across the sea, in this, have shown a greater tenacity even than many of our own sympathetic people. Here at home we find good men and women yielding to despair. Men who two or three years ago counted upon our participation in a society of nations as obvious have now settled back into a sense of hopelessness. But in Europe it is not so, and our brethren there give striking testimony to the fact that hope does "spring eternal in the human breast."

"How do the European peoples feel toward us?" is the question often asked as we return. Their feeling is one of disappointment that has not reached disillusionment, mingled with faith that still persists. They feel that we have left the field of battle without stopping to bury the dead or to help repair the devastation made by our own artillery.

Recognition for our private, philanthropic help is not overlooked and still gives impulses to prayers of gratitude. No rancor is manifested, just disappointment; sometimes, however, almost to despair.

More Than Ever Today Youth Detests Selfishness, Injustice and War

By DR. W. E. GARDNER, Secretary, etc., Episcopal Church.

Youth is searching for the power that Christianity has always had; the power that can be applied every day. More than ever today youth detests selfishness, injustice and war of every kind. The young do not think so much about the wrong and evil in these things as we do; they think they are foolish and unnecessary curses.

The youth of the world today are hunting for truth more than they were twenty years ago, and they are interested in nonmaterial objectives of life because world events compel them to that kind of an interest. Most of the inhabited parts of the world are explored. The adventures of life are no longer in discovering countries. The adventures of the future, youth knows, are in the realm of ideas. Every boy and every girl with ambition knows that success depends more on morals and mind than on muscle.

Everywhere boys and girls are looking for spiritual power. They may call it by different names, but they seek spiritual power. They will find the power they need in religion where mankind has found it throughout the ages.

IS THRILL IN HUNT

Malaysian Buffalo Worthy of Pursuer's Skill.

Saladang Absolutely Without Fear, and One of the Most Ferocious Beasts of the Jungle.

The saladang, or Malaysian buffalo, is the most dangerous animal on earth. So, at least, thinks Mr. Charles Mayer, the animal collector, who, writing in Asia, describes a thrilling experience that he once had in the jungle with one of the fierce brutes. He adds significantly that not one full-grown saladang has ever been captured alive.

At sundown, he says, we were approaching an opening where we intended to make camp when we heard a crashing ahead. "Saladangs!" screamed my Malay trackers and, dropping everything, jumped for the trees just as two of the brutes came charging down on us. I jumped backward and made for a tree, and as I pulled myself up I saw the bull saladang catch my gun bearer Ali on his horns and toss him. I slipped to the ground to get my rifle, which Ali had been carrying; but I had forgotten the other animal, which instantly charged. I dodged behind a tree just in time and as the beast rushed past slashed at her with my parang, and she plunged bellowing into the jungle. Then the bull turned on me, but I swung up among the branches out of his reach.

I fired down at him repeatedly with my revolver, but the little bullets had no effect, and my rifle with its dynamite cartridges was on the ground. Night came on, but the saladang did not cease his watchful waiting. Meanwhile my thirst became terrible, and ants and mosquitoes swarmed over me. Morning came and wore away to noon, and still the beast made no move to depart.

Finally I called to my men, who were scattered through the trees near me, to join me, and they swung from limb to limb until we were together, with the saladang beneath us bellowing and pawing. Besides our parangs we had four spears and three krises. We cut some stout, straight branches from the trees and to them with strips torn from our sarongs bound the krises, which happily were poisoned in the Malay fashion. I knew that they would kill a man in a few minutes, but I was not sure what the effect would be on the large and powerful saladang.

We next dangled a bunch of leaves in front of the bull, provoking him to charge upon it, and whenever he came within reach we lunged at him with our krises and spears. After an hour the poison had seemingly not affected the bull in the least, and we were not situated so that we could give him a death wound.

Evening came on, and I was beginning to fear that we should have to spend another night in the tree, when I observed that the great beast was showing less fury. He began to sway upon his legs. After a little while he started to totter away. But his strength was going fast; his head drooped; then he went down on his knees, bellowing weakly. Presently his hindquarters slumped and blood began to flow from his mouth.

I dropped from my perch and, stepping quickly to where my rifle was lying, raised it and put him out of his misery. Even though he had routed us completely, had kept us treed and had killed my good friend and assistant Ali, I felt sorry for him. He had been victorious almost to the very last.—Youth's Companion.

Biographical Lore Neglected.

A book has been published containing the reminiscences of nearly everybody who knew Robert L. Stevenson very well. Such a work about Theodore Roosevelt would fill a bookcase.

We should like to see the personal recollections of all the friends and acquaintances who knew O. Henry in Texas, where his first literary work was done. This is a field of his endeavor which has been singularly overlooked.

There are other bright lights in literature of whose personality a readable and instructive record might be made before they have receded too far into the past—William Dean Howells for one.

Note how assiduously every shred of information about Edgar Allan Poe is still sought and published and the last remnants that pertain to Walt Whitman, even his scattering contributions to New York journalism.

Everywhere, and so often, the chroniclers wait until too long after the passing of distinguished literary men before beginning their researches. While their contemporaries are still alive is the time for the harvest.—Exchange.

Memorial to Campus Love.

More than half a century ago a young co-ed and a young bachelor graduate at Indiana university in Bloomington discussed matrimony, during a walk on the campus, during which time the young co-ed took two small maple saplings, twisted them together and left them. She remembered the occurrence long after she had married another, told her son of it and he went to Bloomington, hunted over the campus, found the saplings still entwined, grown into a great solid tree trunk, but with the spiral lines showing plainly they had been lashed together long ago and had become one. The son, now a college professor, carried away a picture of the tree.—Ohio State Journal.

Makes Painting Easy.

A portable paint-spraying outfit, recently placed on the market, is distinguished by its compactness and lightness, weighing, with its carrying case, only about 28 pounds, so that a workman can take it along to any job where there are facilities for running it, says the Popular Mechanics Magazine. Its air compressor is driven by an electric motor which consumes about as much current as a dim lamp.

HOW BODY GROWS AND WORKS

Small Glands Which Appear of Little Moment Are Really of the Highest Importance.

Of all the fascinating mysteries connected with human life there is none of more absorbing interest, nor more full of possibilities for future development for the good of mankind, than the discovery of the forces which guide and control the growth of the body and regulate its activities in regard to appetites, feelings and emotion. Gradually we are learning something about a number of small glands, each of which makes a special material that is poured into the blood, whence it exerts a profound influence on these activities. Indeed, so powerful is the influence of some of these glands, small as most of them are, that their loss will result in death. They are intimately concerned with such questions as being tall or short, fat or thin, the growth and texture of hair and bone, the regulation of the sex functions and maturity, and the changes which take place in the body when one is worried, anxious or afraid. Practical use is already being made of the little that is known about them. But there is much danger that ignorance and speculation may lead to exploitation and charlatanry at the expense of the uninformed, the best preventive for which is a plain statement of the truth. Doctor Cannon, one of the pioneers in this field, tells in Hygeia what is known and adds that these "glands exercise such potent influences on our efficiency and well-being that when we know how they operate we shall probably be in a position to determine the manifestations of sex characters and possibly influence sex behavior, modify the growth of children and of lower animals, and order the rate or nature of chemical change in our bodies. We are still far from attaining these ends. In the presence of both the overenthusiastic and the overconservative, the attitude which is certain to be right in the end is that of demanding rigorously the well-ascertained facts as a basis for both critical judgment and for hope.

Illiteracy of the Nations.

I pick up one of those encyclopaedic books and turn to the pages which tell about the illiteracy of various countries, writes "Gerard" in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

I find that in Spain 59 persons over ten years of age out of every 100 cannot read at all.

Glancing over the record for other Hispanic countries I see that in Argentina 54 out of 100 are illiterate; in Chile, 50; in Colombia, 73; Mexico, 70; Costa Rica, 80, and Guatemala, 92.

In that Hispanic sister, Portugal, 69 in 100 persons cannot read, and in Brazil, largely colonized by Portuguese, 85 per cent of the population is illiterate.

How could the "Hispanic masses," who are unable to read anything, "recognize and appreciate" literary genius?

In the United States only five in 100 persons above ten years are illiterate and in Philadelphia there are but four illiterates for every 100 inhabitants.

American masses may not enthuse over Bonavente, but they still enjoy a slight edge on the "Hispanic masses," since they are able to read if they want to.

Lonely Must Go It Alone.

The plan to supply feminine dinner or theater companions for lonesome gentlemen in a great city far from their native firesides, described recently, has failed, says an exchange. It provided that the stranger within New York's portals seeking pleasing companionship, was to pay $10 to a bureau conducted by two enterprising young women and be provided with a suitable companion, the bureau dividing fifty-fifty with the companion. Arrangements were made by telephone, references being exchanged. A newspaper reporter was the first customer and the plan worked fine. He wrote it up glowingly for his paper. After the news story appeared New York seemed full of lonely men. The bureau's telephone rang every five minutes and a reserve stock of companions had to be called out. But New York was "kidding" the bureau of social service. Only one man appeared to take his companion to dinner and the theater and he proposed a restaurant and a picture show. The bureau has quit. It's plan was too ideal.

Enormous Whale's Skull.

A whale skull, so large that it had to be sawed into eight pieces for handling and crating, was recently found on the shore of Alitak bay, Alaska, by a representative of the biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture, who was in the territory investigating the fox farming industry. Local aid was given by the skipper of a passing ship, who took it to a nearby cannery, from which place it was possible to send it to the states. In accordance with a cooperative understanding the skull was sent to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington.

Dogs Efficient Guardians.

The treasures of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts are guarded each night by two giant police dogs who are trained to refuse to accompany anyone but the watchman who has charge of them. At intervals each night they are led through the darkened galleries. All employees have been cautioned against remaining in the building after hours because of the danger of attack by the powerful canines. But for the intervention of the watchman recently, an official of the museum, who stayed until late in the evening, would have been torn to pieces.

Gentle Slam.

"W. L. George is one of the score or so of English novelists continually touring America, and a Boston lady scored off him rather neatly one evening at a dinner.

"What do you think of Bernard Shaw?" she asked.

"Oh," said Mr. George, "Shaw's always lecturing, you know."

"But at least," said the lady, "he stays in England to do it, doesn't he?"

POLISH NATION HAS 27,000,000

Country Is Now Sixth in Population in Europe, According to Official Information.

New York.—The new republic of Poland, now in its fifth year, has a population of 27,160,163, and is the sixth nation in Europe, according to official information compiled by the Polish bureau of information.

"Its population is exceeded only by Russia, Germany, Great Britain, France and Italy," the statement says. "Poland has a population as large as Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Sweden, Norway and Switzerland combined."

Warsaw Has 941,000.

Warsaw's population is given as 941,001; Lodz, 451,444; Lemberg, 219,000; Cracow, 181,000; Posen, 169,000; Vilna (estimated), 146,000.

The republic has now been divided into 16 states or administrative units, called voyvodships. The city of Warsaw, however, as capital of the republic, is distinct from any voyvodship.

After struggling with various boundary disputes on all sides, and emerging victorious from a war with Russia, Poland established her frontiers and then turned her attention to internal affairs.

The first regular Polish parliament came into being November 27, 1922, succeeding the constituent assembly that had been organized as an emergency governing body early in 1919. During its life, the assembly enacted more than five hundred laws, including a constitution providing for a house of representaitves elected by universal suffrage, and a senate elected in the same manner.

Economy was another far-reaching measure instituted by the new republic. During 1922, a reduction of 25,000 civilian employees was made in the various departments. Military affairs also were subjected to sweeping changes. A standing army of 25,000 was recommended, with compulsory military service of two years for all males reaching the age of twenty-one.

Demonstrates Its Stability.

The republic demonstrated its stability in December, 1922, following the assassination of President Narutowicz, the first chief executive, after he had been in office but two days. In the absence of precedent, the leaders turned to the constitution for guidance. Four days after the assassination, an election was held and a new president took office in accordance with the expressed will of the people.

NO RAGS FOR HOOKED RUGS

Modern Housewife Has Not Facilities for Making Those Once Popular Floor Coverings.

The oldtime American floor covering, the hooked and braided rugs, are greatly in demand as the vogue for colonial furnishings advances. The braided rugs now on the market are made in fast colors. Present-day closets and modern methods of living do not admit of the modern housewife making rugs. She has no rags.

Cast-off garments are sold, given away or remade—never stored away in this day of hurry. The disposition of this surplus keeps the closet shelves bare. Braided rugs must be bought, although the task of braiding and sewing is not a difficult one.

Genuine hooked rugs of authentic colonial origin are getting scarcer and scarcer, and though many dealers systematically ransack the garrets of New England, the supply seems to come exclusively from those people who have been induced only by the high prices offered to part with their family treasures. There is a steady demand for these rugs, and those people who handle them for the trade find that they sell readily, and that the best specimens are snapped up in a hurry.—Kansas City Star.

HAVE HOMES UNDER GROUND

In One Part of France Whole Villages Have Established Themselves Beneath the Soil.

In his account of the "Retreat of the Ten Thousand," after the failure of Cyrus the Younger to capture the crown of Persia from his younger brother, Xenophon (400 B. C.) mentions a peculiar tribe living in the Armenian highlands who dwelt under the ground with all their live stock. In some regions along the chalk cliffs of France one will find whole villages under ground, for the reason that the surface is valuable for vineyards. The owner digs a pit or quarry in the surface, forming a cellar, which is accessible from one side only. Then from the sides of the pit he cuts the rooms of his dwelling under the vineyard. The windows and door open into the pit, while the rock that is taken out is used for a fence.

In these chalk cliffs primitive man found shelter in caves or beneath overhanging ledges, where he also found flint for his tools. Later came the ancient Gauls to dwell in these caves, which offered homes for a large population.

Less "Boarding Round" Now.

As far back as 1894 Hall county, Nebraska, built a cottage as a dwelling for its district school teacher. Lately a canvass of the whole country has shown that there are now about three thousand dwellings owned by school districts or townships, and that the schools that have them seem to get the best teachers. "Boarding round" has its drawbacks.—Youth's Companion.

The Main Thing.

"They're arrested me for bootlegging."

"You'd better see Lawyer Gilbwitz."

"Do you suppose he'll take an interest in my case?"

"He will if you can show him by the size of the retaining fee that you've been a successful bootlegger."—Gingham Age-Herald.

LOOT FOUND IN BLACK FOREST.

Thieves Hid Stolen Goods in Deep Forest When Car Broke Down.

Thieves who looted a general store at Ludlow, Mc Kean county, last Friday morning and carried their loot away in the merchant's new Hudson sedan were obliged to abandon both the car and the other stolen property on Monday about two miles from the fire tower on the Jersey Shore Pike.

Examination of the car showed that the thieves had accidentally stepped on the transmission lock and not having the keys to release it had tried without success to break the lock—and finally after spending the night in the car had either driven on in another car or had been picked up by a passing motorist and escaped by way of Coudersport.

Seventeen suits, 4 dozen shirts, all the ladies' hose and a purse comprised the stolen property recovered. It was found in the deep forest adjoining the pike. The car was undamaged except that the lever to the transmission had been cut, the wiring ruined and the spark plugs removed. It was towed to Coudersport for repairs.

Much Bad Liquor.

One per cent of 80,000 samples of liquor seized by prohibition agents during the last fiscal year and analyzed in government laboratories, was genuine liquor, Prohibition Commissioner Haynes has announced, reiterating that the adulteration of bootleg whiskey was leading to very serious physical consequences

Mr. Haynes said the four sources of bootleg liquor were moonshine, distilled denatured alcohol, smuggled goods and liquor illegally withdrawn from bonded warehouses.

—Mrs. Arvilla Hoyt, aged 75 years, died at her home in Nelson last Friday morning following an extended illness. She is survived by her husband and three sons and one daughter. The funeral was held from the home last Sunday afternoon, Rev. Goodrich, of Osceola officiating.

PRESIDENT HARDING ILL.

Consultation of Physicians Reveals a Serious Condition of Health

An associated press dispatch from San Francisco says that President Harding will be rushed to Washington by special train as soon as his condition will permit, probably, however, not within the next ten days. The President's personal physicians called eminent medical authorities of California into consultation.

How serious is his illness, his physicians have not said, beyond the statement issued Monday night that "new symptoms" had arisen during the day, indicating complications in the case. But it was regarded sufficiently serious to cause a cancellation of the chief executive's entire California program and to bring about a consultation into which two leading California physicians were called.

The public will be kept informed of the chief executive's condition by means of frequent bulletins.

Potter County Stops Bear Trapping.

As the result of a petition from Potter County sportsmen to the State game commission the practice of the State of trapping bear in that county to be shipped out of the State has been discontinued. It is said that Potter county sportsmen were becoming alarmed at the inroads being made on the ursine population. Last week Game Commissioner Seth Gordon notified L. K. Hogarth, of Smethport, Traveling State Game Protector who has been in charge of the operations to rid Potter county of its excess population of bears, which had become a menace to farmers' flocks, to suspend operations.

—J. R. Hazelett, of Galeton, who for the past three years has been game warden in Potter County, has been transferred to Carbon County. Harry VanCleve, who has been game refuge officer, located at Hulls, has been transferred to Coudersport and Ernest Hunsinger, of Sweden Valley, has been chosen for the position at Hulls.

CHANGES IN ELECTION LAW.

Eleven Changes Made in Pennsylvania in 1923 Session.

Eleven changes in the State election laws were made by the last legislature, according to a compilation by George D. Thorn, head of the State election bureau. The most important changes are those permitting women to determine their residence for voting or holding office, the same as men are permitted; permitting persons absent from home on election day to vote by mail, and repealing the act exempting women from arrest for non-payment of tax.

The changes are outlined briefly by Mr. Thorn as follows:

"Act No. 43 provides that a candidate nominated at the primary may withdraw his name as a candidate by filing a request in writing, duly acknowledged, with the secretary of the commonwealth at least twenty-five days before a municipal election and fifty days before a general election.

"Act No. 111 amends section 74 of the election act of 1839 by providing for pay of justices of the peace to receive $3 a year for one ballot-box and an additional dollar a year for each additional ballot-box.

"Act No. 112 provides for appointment of two registrars every year in third-class cities, and requires them to be qualified voters of the city instead of the precinct or ward.

"Act No. 122 repeals the exemption of women from arrest and imprisonment for non-payment of taxes.

"Act No. 165 changes the dates of the spring primary in presidential years from the third Tuesday in May to the fourth Tuesday in April.

"Act No. 171 provides that when any of the members of the computing board of election returns are candidates for office and not qualified to act, the remaining officer or officers who are not candidates shall perform the duties of the board.

"Act No. 201 of the session of 1923 provides that the voters who expect to be unavoidably absent from the county on the day of the primary, or on the day of the election, may make application not more than thirty days and not less than three days next preceding such primary or election to the county commissioners of the county in which they reside for a certificate of qualification and an official absent voter's ballot.

"For information as to details of absent voting communicate with your county commissioners, who, under the law, are required to furnish all the supplies, blank forms, etc., to carry the act into effect.

"Act No. 278 amends the act of July 21, 1919, which provided for the registration in cities of the first and second classes of persons employed in the service of this State or of the federal government by including the wife or the husband of such employe in the privilege of registering by petition instead of by appearing personally before the registrars.

"Act No. 417 provides that the domicile of a married woman, for the purpose of voting or holding any public office, shall be determined for all purposes as if she were unmarried."

ICE MINE HAS RIVAL.

Cave Near Dubois Said to Show Same Phenomena.

A Dubois correspondent of the Gazette and Bulletin says:

"Dubois motorists have spent days making the trip to the Coudersport ice mine. Yet there is a similar freak of nature within a few miles of this city. On the farm of G. N. Rishell, two miles south of Troutville, an abandoned coal mine has been producing ice for more than thirty years. Because of its isolated location, few knew of it until this week.

"Thirty-five years ago a coal mine was opened on the Rishell farm. After the heading had been driven in about 200 feet it was abandoned. Two years later while harvesting wheat, farm hands discovered the mine full of ice melted back only as far as the sun's rays could reach. The old mine caved in and the mouth of the original slope closed. Two years ago another effort was made to open the coal 600 feet around the hill from the old slope. The shaft was driven more than 400 feet into the hill when the miners were confronted with an atmosphere below freezing. Water that dripped into the opening froze solid over night, and it was necessary to remove two or three carloads every morning before they could get their cars over the rails. The ice proved such an obstacle that the new opening was abandoned and is now frozen solid.

The ice mine is in what is known as "the wilderness." The few persons living near the ice mine have been getting their ice from the mine for years. It is easily accessible and hundreds have accepted Rishell's invitation to visit the place."

CIVIL SERVICE POSITIONS.

Automobile Mechanics and Drivers Needed in Federal Service.

The United States civil service commission announces that an urgent need exists in the federal service for skilled men in the following lines: Special automobile mechanic, $1,800-$2,000 a year; general automobile mechanic, $1,600-$1,800 a year; automobile mechanic's helper, $1,500 a year; garagemen and drivers, $1,200-$1,450 a year; drivers and mechanics, $1,200 and $1,800 a year. Applications for examinations for these positions may be obtained from the secretary of the Federal civil service, at the registry window in the post office.

Until further notice, on account of the urgent needs of the service, applications for these examinations will be accepted at any time. Papers will be rated promptly and certification made as the needs of the service require. Applicants entitled to preference because of military or naval service should submit with their application either their official discharge or a certified copy. The age limit for these positons ranges from 18 to 55 years.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

W. B. Connell Will Address the Sheep Breeders of Tioga County.

Mr. W. B. Connell, sheep specialist for the State, will address the members of the sheep breeders association of Tioga County at Tioga on Monday, August 6 at 8:00 p. m. This meeting will probably be held in the Grange Hall. Mr. Connell is one of the best posted men in the sheep industry in Pennsylvania. He will also have some very good information relative to marketing, lambs and wool. His talk on sheep management and wool marketing will be of interest to everyone interested in sheep breeding.

A short business meeting will be held at which the new officers will be elected for the association for the coming year. The sheep industry of Tioga County will be better because of a large attendance at this meeting.

Tioga County Picnic Association Holds Meeting.

The officers and committeemen of the Tioga County Picnic Association held a meeting at the Farm Bureau office on Saturday, July 28. The sense of the meeting was that a good speaker should be secured from the Dairymen's League office. In view of the fact that no officer of the League could be present on Thursday it was voted to hold the picnic on Friday, August 24, if that date would not conflict with any other county wide picnic. Anyone reading this notice and knowing of a county wide picnic or celebration would be doing the officers a great favor by notifying the Secretary of the Association, P. P. Korb, of Wellsboro.

PAUL P. KORB.
County Agent.

837,000 Auto Tags for 1923.

Automobile registration tags up to 837,000 have been issued by the State highway department, Registrar Eynon announced last week. Within a short time there is expected to be a scramble among new applicants for the coveted tag bearing six eights.

As is customary, tag No. 1 is attached to the governor's official State car. Governor Pinchot, however, is partial to the numeral one and on his own car has tags Nos. 11, 111, 1,111. C. P. Ray, Jr., of Bryn Mawr, holds 11,111 and L. P. Sharpless, of West Chester, 111-111.

Former Governor Sproul still sticks to sevens. He has 7, 77, 777 and 7-777 on his cars. Lieutenant Governor Davis, tag No. 2; Secretary of Highways Wright, No. 3; Auditor General Lewis, No. 4; General W. W. Atterbury, No. 5, 55 and 555.
